

Between Munich and Kiel – explore 2000 miles of Germany

German cities present many faces to the visitors, full of tradition and yet modern. They are pulsating with life and are cosmopolitan meeting places, offering you the treasures of the past and the Sparkling springs every: where, more than 200 spas. Springs for heart and kidney complaints, for every liver and stomach, for all types of treatment.

And if nothing alls you, golf and fresh air will make you feel better still.

Here there's nothing virtuous in staying thirsty. Wine has been grown for nearly 2000 years. Every town has brewed its own beer since the Middle Ages whilst German sparkling wine came in about 1800. You'll never be dry in Germany.

A shopping spree in elegant shops that sell fine tewellery, rare antiques and trendy fashions. Or in the little bakery. After all, there are more than 200 kinds of bread

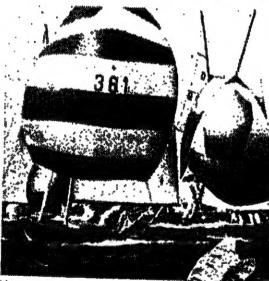

@

貒

Albrecht Dürer was

See in 1971 born 500 years ago.
He painted in the ancient town of Nürn-berg, where his house of the world see many towns in will discover in 1972-Germany, scene of the Olympic Game Follow the whole, or part. of the 2000 mile "Olympic Tour" we have designed for you.

You can sail on all stretches of the German seas (In Olympic style, too). And the next swimming pool is just Take to the air! Gliders, anyone?

Between Munich and Kiel explore 2000 miles of Germany i am interested in a pre-Olympic visit to German Please send me (uti information

Please write in block letters and do not omit the postal code. ion to Deutsche Zentrale für Fremden i (Main), Beethovenstraße 69

The German Tribune

Hamburg, 16 December 1971 Teath Year - No. 505 - By air

A WEEKLY REVIEW OF THE GERMAN PRESS

C 20725 C

Decision-laden December faces politicians quiet for years. The December conrences of the Nato Council of Ministers ne already described as traditional and the Common Market too is often exmemaly active towards the end of the

This December is so full of negotiations hat there must be concern for the nerves. hysical health and mental powers of phiticians gathering in Warsaw, Washington, Rome, Berlin, Paris, Copenhagen, Russels, the Azores, Florida and New York where the dangers of a serious war ke being debatted.

That entails much work for govern-sents and their experts. But there can no larger be any doubt that the enormous efforts being made this December are will-intentioned. The year seems to be mishing better than it looked four weeks

In October all those involved in the bir German Berlin talks were still very spileal about how and when they word end. February and March were brecast as possible dates.

But then everything went quickly after sethney's power in Moscow increased ad after his long talks with Willy Brandt in the Crimea and President Pompidou in the Crimea and Pomp the Crimea and President Pompidou in has. The 'Federal Republic' is now sping the rich 'harvest' of a foreign soley that even friends at home and aread sometimes considered as a risky adpolitically suicidal balancing act.

West Germany's efforts are now being toked upon in Western capitals more

IN THIS ISSUE PREIGN AFFAIRS

Bonn plays a modest OLITICS CSU attempts to change

TERTAINMENT Folksinger Judy Coilins, www.Frankfurt

HE ECONOMY To play about with exports could harm the whole economy, fritz Dietz warns

Militadmiration (for the courage neces tespect (for the precise negotiating has been taken from a danger zone) Though a number of problems still have obe-faced it can already be claimed that the Brandt and State Secretary The Bahr have gone to work with the me facilitiedness, toughness and attended of the same and attended of the same and the Republic into the Western alliance.

for a new path of future cooperation. The two sides have learn the economic and political lessons of the recent past.

Parls has not thought and acted in such a European fashion for years. Who would have thought three years ago that by the end of 1971. Prance would be committed to British entry into the Common Market and that the French government would protest must strongly against American troop withdrawais?

British was without doubt correct when he proposed an early summit conference with Pompidou in view of these developments so that a joint position confidential talks. imparisons are always misleading esnd vary. But claims of this type can be

Dolitically, Christmas has not been heard abroad and they are always spoken with an undertone of respect.

It is good for a nation to learn that its main political policies are in harmony with the trends of the age. As a senior American official recently said, West German foreign policy is swimming in

The opposite feeling — that of thinking oneself sold down the river, of having no alternative or sullenly lagging behind current developments — is intolerable in the long run.

That is why the most difficult political ourney this December will be that made by Opposition leader Rainer Barzel to Moscow. Barzel is known to view his trip with concern. It has always been easier to be creative and contribute to innovations and new ideas than to prevent them.

International politics is already further advanced than the ratified reality. The Soviet Union and Warsaw Pact countries are pressing for a European security conference to begin in 1972. Paris and Bonn also attach importance to this

The conference would be held in order to achieve the next aim of detente - a combination of treatles banning military action against other countries under inter-national law, thus practically preventing aggression. There could for instance be a ban on increasing present troop strengths or major troop movements. All this could be controlled by satellite spice.

Developments will show whether the Soviet Union is really interested in this. It is obvious that the Eastern European States (perhaps with the exception of the German Democratic Republic) are all for it. They hope that it will provide them with greater room for manoeuvre and greater independence within their own

The meeting between Chancellor Willy Brandt and French President Georges Compilied has fulfilled some very high expectations. It has not only put an end to persistent rumours about some crisis or other between France and the Federal Republic but has also prepared the way for a new path of future cooperation. The

Envoy reports

Egon Bahr, State Secretary from the Chancellor's Office currently handling negotiations with the German Democratic Republic, reported on 2 December to Ambassadors of the Western Powers on the latest developments in his negotiations with the GDR envoy, Michael Kohl.

bloc, specially where their protecting power, the Soviet Union, is concerned.

Proposals for a multilateral balanced reduction of forces on the other hand seem to meet with difficulties in Moscow. The fact that unofficial Nato observer Manlio Brosio has still received no date for a visit to Moscow despite all the so-called signals of recent years cannot be explained away by a dislike for him personnally or the multilateral level of

It is more likely that military experts in the Soviet Union have discovered too many problems of their own in this reduction of forces. How many Russian troops for instance could be withdrawn outweighed by far by agreements reached in other fields.

agreed on East-West relations is proof of the French President's approval of Chan-

Paris expects the Federal Republic to thirn more to her neighbours in the West after the first phase of hell Ostpolitik has been closed with the ratification of the treaties with Moscow and Warsaw.

The Buropean summit conference to be attended next year by the Common Market members and applicant nations presents a great opportunity for progress towards Buropean unity. Sights in Paris are rulearly as it on Burope. The present favourable mood should be expleited further, od bise providenthe application to (Frankfufter Rundschau, 6 December 1971)

cellor Brandt's Ostpolitik.

Successful Brandt-Pompidou

meeting in Paris

from Eastern Europe without the powersthat-be in Moscow running the danger of not being able to intervene in cases of

There are also many difficulties facing the Western alliance on this question. How for example can there be a controlled reduction of the thousands of atomic warheads and flexible mediumrange missiles?

Intelligence satellites can control the teduction of the large inter-continental missiles as the installations essential for them are extensive and impossible to

The Strategic Arms Limitation Talks (SALT) may result in partial success but this is not even theoretically perceptible in the MBFR talks. Nato Ministers will in the MBFR talks. Nato Ministers will not be able to reach any results at the forthcoming meeting.

The decisive and most urgent question is the reorganisation of the Eastern currency system. But the end is in sight. The Europeans will have to act in close solidarity to counter the brutal methods of the Americans, especially those employed by Secretary of State for the Iransury John Compily.

Connaily's attempts to cause divisions between the large European industrial nations or, even to play them off against each other have not yet reached their Low Sept to part have office

In this respect Treasuryman Connally is currently indulging in more foreign policy than State Department officials. While William Rogers, Secretary of State, for Foreign Affairs, is emphasising the need for partnership with Europe, his colleague Connally never stops trying to provoke members of the alliance

1. Agreement will soon be reached on new exchange rates as no country can endure ther present situation for long. But this does not solve the economic and currency problems of the Western world.

Hans Heigert (Suddeutsche Zeitung, 4 December 1971)

FOREIGN AFFAIRS

Bonn plays a modest role in world affairs

DEUTSCHE ZEITUNG

While Richard Nixon is travelling part of the way across the Atlantic to meet President Pompidou and Prime Minister Heath, Chancellor Willy Brandt is having to go to Florida to see the US President in his holiday home.

America seems to be making distinctions between its customers before turning to greater issues in its relations with China and the Soviet Union.

The art of balance is being rehearsed for a period of time that has begun to contrast sharply with the post-war era of static positions and bipolar tension.

The play of forces has become more complicated and less easily controlled by the buttons of command in the two main

The change is due not only to the triangle of power now beginning to form but just as much to the fact that States once taking a back seat in international politics are now coming to the fore.

Ten years ago nobody would have come up with the fantastic idea that an American President would be prepared for a Metternich-type role as training for the peace-keeping arts of balance.

There also exists the suspicion that Moscow will try to learn from the diplomacy practised in Russia since the days of Czar Alexander I, though suitably adapted to the Soviet age.

If you do not look too closely and for the time being ignore the main stage of action - the curtain will soon he raised in Peking - France will be seen to have the satisfaction of the meeting in the Azores

The admission of the People's Republic

L of China into the United Nations will create a completely new balance of power in Asia. The dominant position assumed by the United States since 1945 should interests in Asia and keep Chia in rein.

America's footsteps in the United Nations vote on Chinese entry. The Japanese government on the other hand is blaming

the Foreign Ministry for judging the Malaysia's foreign policy has proved sucessful. She was one of the countries that voted for the Albanian resolution on friendly relations with China.

situation incorrectly.

Chinese entry.

predominance in Asia.

That is presumably how President Pompidou is looking at the situation. Following in the footsteps of the dead magician who himself had a dexterous though extravagant balancing act, Pompidou is finding it increasingly difficult to counter the erosion of France's power with the opportunities offered by a new, vital technocracy. The meeting with Nixon will help his image. The West German government can only look on with satisfaction if France takes precedence in the quickly-changing world of international politics and if the pale splendour of old-time Europe emanates

If Bonn were to find itself in a superior position to Paris in world politics it would have to sound the alarm-bells and correct the situation - as long as it was still interested in a Federal Europe,

The Federal Republic does not belong to the major powers, not even via the back-stairs of economic strength in which national economists take too much pride despite being so basically uncertain of

Rump Germany is and remains no more than an intermediate power. The meeting at Key Biscayne on 28 and 29 December must not be over-estimated in our minds. Wishful thinking must not be allowed to

Now that he has been raised on a pedestal with the award of the Nobel Peace Prize, will the Chancellor be able to guard himself against the dangers of German presumption and day-dreaming?

Because of previous experiences Willy Brandt is not susceptible to the temptations of crude nationalist arrogance. He is however seen to be more sentimental than the first Chancellor, Konrad Ade-

Adenauer's dry cynicism was a sure guarantee that Germany's reduced stature would be seen in its right proportions. A limit was thus set to national ambitions.

Key Biscayne must not go to our heads. The invitation may be a compliment in view of the transition, prompted by Washington, to the new possibilities of the triangle of major powers — but only may be, and it could quickly turn into a burden for us, a far greater burden than we are prepared to bear.

The more objectively we consider the changes in American policy heralded by President Nixon on 15 July and 15 August, the more certain we shall be about accommodating out limited interests to the necessity of European unity and using this as a yardstick to judge the American demand for burden-sharing.

The Nixon-Brandt meeting is of course overshadowed by the indispensability of a close bond of trust between West Germany and the United States to provide a solid foundation to the military alliance within the North Atlantic Treaty Organi-

But behind this there are new problems that must not be ignored for reasons of pure constraint. The problems begin with the new currency system that s needed if the whole Western camp is not to dissolve into its individual components in the foreseeable future.

The final problem is the question of the American military presence in Europe. Some of the sting can be taken out of the ituation but it must be reckoned that the forces will be reduced within the course of the next few years to a level compatible with America's real interests.

Basically, America as a major power must shoulder all her burdens, both the financial and the moral ones arising from her own crisis of identity. It is senseless to accept America's neo-protectionism as this would be a poor deal in every respect for everyone involved.

The Federal Republic can only play a modest role here - as reflected in the limited aims of its active Ostpolitik. The more certain he is that Germany's efforts fit into the general European framework, the more confidently the Chancellor will be able to fly to Key Biscayne.

Jürgen Tern (Doutsche Zeitung, 3 December 1971).

now be a thing of the past.

America itself prompted the change by deciding to withdraw from Indo-China and extending poace feelers towards Peking. The Americans have not exactly won many friends in their 26 years of Along with this unpopularity the Americans have gained the reputation of unreliability among their former allies. Billions of dollars have been wasted and there has been no progress worth mentioning in the economic growth of Asian countries. The United States used weapons in the attempt to maintain its Asian political situation since 1945.

A new age has now begun in Asia. The entry of the People's Republic of China into the United Nations forces Asian ed its former friendly relations.

countries to change their policy, turn Indonesia broke off relation in Tokyo the government is being attacked by the political parties and economic circles for following in Thailand, a country that has previously been carried in the wake of the United States and profited by it, is also trying to establish contacts with Peking.

The anti-Communist Philippines, pre-viously fully aligned to the United States, has also stepped in line with other Asian countries seeking to establish nor-

In Indo-China only the tiny kingdom of The idea of neutralising South-East Laos has greeted China's entry. The Asia put forward a long time ago by Laotians hope that China will be able to the stantage of withdraw from Laotian territory.

American aid.

ended his anti-Communist camp

draw from Korea. The tiny British crown colony of Hongkong has welcomed the admission of the Peole's Republic of China into the United Nations, though it looks to the future with mixed feelings.

Christian Roll

Defense Minister Schmidt stresses Asia's importance

Will the Federal Republic embark upon a more active policy towards Asia and once and for all increase its political involvement in an area of the world that is growing in importance every day, Defence Minister Helmut Schmid

"Europe's political stability also de pends on Asia's most urgent economic and social problems being solved," the Minister added.

Returning from unoffical visits to Thailand, Japan, Australia and New Zealand Schmidt said that his fourteen-day tour should be seen as proof of this country's concern for Asia.

At a press conference held at the end of his talks with representatives of the Japanese government Schmidt emphasis ed the problems arising from the shifts in bloc structure.

New groups such as Europe, Japan and the People's Republic of China were shooting up with surprising rapidity to challenge the supreme position of the Inited States and the Soviet Union. Minister Schmidt added that Japan and the Federal Republic were thus faced by large number of similar problems.

Security problems in Asia and the Pacific area, the international currenty crisis and questions of disarmament these fore formed the basis of his talks with Premier Sato, Foreign Minister Fukuh, Defence Minister Nishimura and Did President Funada.

The international currency crisis was discussed with particular concern at lelmut Schmidt's talks on the eve of the meeting of the Council of Ten.

Schmidt stated that the solution of this issue was of overwhelming importance foreign policy in both Tokyo and Bom. There was not much time for this, b added, obviously referring to the Ameican presidential elections which are coning closer and closer.

The two sides once again stressed that the crisis can only be solved on t multinational level. The Japanese gover-ment thus denied rumours that Japanese taken the initiative in Rome.

Finally, Defence Minister Schmidt a nounced that Prime Minister Sato had expressed the wish to meet Chancellot Brandt in Japan.

This invitation should be of importance in view of the new generation of pol-ticions growing up in the ruling Liberal-Democratic Party. This group supports revision and intensification of Japanese policy towards Asia.

Looking at things from an Asian point of view, it is hard to say whether West Germany's policy towards Asia really is a lively as Schmidt claims.

(Handelsblatt, 30 November 1971)

The German Tribune

Publisher: Friedrich Reinecke, Editor-in-Chie-Eberhard Wagner. Assistant Editor-in-Chie-Olto Heinz. Editor: Alexander Anthony. Eng-lish language sub-aditor: Geoffrey Penny. Distribution Manager: Georgine von Piaten. Friedrich Reinecke Verlag GmbH, 23 Schoens Aussicht, Hamburg 78. Tel.: 22881. Teles 02 14733. Bonn bureau: Konrad Kadlubowsti, 66 Adenaueraliee, 53 Bonn, Tel.; 22 61 53. Telex. 08 88398.

Advertising rates list No. 8 — Annual subscription DM 25, Printed by Krögers Buch- und Verlagsdruckers, Hamburg-Blankenese, Distributed in the USA by: MASS MAILINGS, Inc. 540 West 24th Street, New York, N.Y. 1001).

All articles which THE GERMAN TRIBUNA reprint are published in cooperation with the editorial staffs of leading newspapers of the Federal Republic of Germany. They are con-plete translations of the original text, in No way abridged nor editoriatly redraised. THE GERMAN TRIBUNE state publishes THE GER-MAN TRIBUNE Quarterly Review, a selection from German periodicals.

in all correspondence please quote your sub-acription number which appears on the wisp per to the right of your address.

OSTPOLITIK

No. 505 - 16 December 1971

Bahr and Kohl seek simple, swift and favourable settlement

nter-German talks to fill in the outlines of the Four-Power agreement on the future of Berlin are on the finishing draight. At the talks between State Secretaries Egon Bahr and Michael Kohl "transit traffic of civilians and freight etween the western sectors of Berlin and the Federal Republic of Germany" not all oblems have been solved down to the ast detail, but at least the problems have sow been brought out into the open and is known where to start looking for the Meantime the Bonn Opposition parties have expressed what they understand by satisfactory inter-German settlement. Their demands centre round some of the more tricky problems, but they are not always realistic.

For instance their insistence that the German Democratic Republic should vaive enforced visas.

As a matter of fact the ambassadorial greement speaks of the "simplest, peediest and most favourable interational practice", presumably something long the lines of the passage of traffic scross the Rhine between Strasbourg in france and Kehl in West Germany.

But the umbrella agreement does not expressly mention the renunciation of transit visas, nor did the Allies come out atrongly in favour of this. On this point Eron Bahr has not been able to achieve my further advances on what concessions the Allies gained.

On the other hand it seems likely that Goa Bahr has managed to arrange for these visus to be issued on an all-in payment basis. This had been another one of contention, since the wording of be agreement was considered ambiguous by finicky legal eagles.

For the CDU/CSU - and to a large edent the Opposition is in agreement with the government on this point - the most important factor is coming to an agreement on border abuses. As far as goods traffic is concerned the difficulties arising are not so much of a legalistic as On this score too the general principle of the umbrella agreement applies, namely that the whole procedure should be carried out as simply, swiftly and favourably as possible.

This can be achieved by the sealing of the means of transport. Then the only checks necessary will be to see if the seals are intact and the accompanying papers are in order. The border abuses clause will be non-applicable.

Thus in the interest of speedy transit it is essential that as many vehicles as possible should be sealed. The technical problem is that there are so many lorries and such that cannot so easily be sealed. So in many cases it will be a question of building the right kind of vehicle.

This not only requires a law to be passed, it also involves finding money. And if the process of sealing lorries, trains and barges is going to be too complicated, costly and time-consuming then all the advantages gained by no longer having to fiddle around with GDR border officials and their bureaucracy will be lost again.

Thus we must devise procedures that fulfil West German economic requirements and East German security precau-

What is much more difficult is the problem of abuses when it concerns not reight but human beings. In the text of the agreement there is mention of searchcs, arrest and expulsion only being allowed in cases "where there are sufficient grounds for suspicion that there has been an abuse of the transit routes for purposes not directly concerned with the passage through (to West Berlin) . . . and running contrary to the general regulations with regard to public order."

The initial line taken by the GDR was that the question of public order, mentioned only once in the agreement, should apply to all sections of the negotiations. The GDR negotiators understood this to apply to all East German

As far as transit traffic was concerned this would have meant that not only criminals, but also people who had broken East German laws would be guilty of "abuse". According to this formula-tion refugees from the GDR would have been arrested or sent back.

Bonn found this unacceptable and the Opposition was quite right in insisting that the matter of abuse should not apply to actions during transit.

The case of criminals, judged as such by both sides, travelling between West Berlin and West Germany is a completely different kettle of fish. Can the GDR be expected to allow free transit to criminals? Legal minds could insist that the GDR is forced to allow this according to the wording of the Berlin agreement, since their crimes and misdemeanours would have nothing to do directly with the matter of transit.

Practical politicians consider it quite possible that the GDR will simply send back the criminal elements. What must be avoided is expulsions of a political nature, otherwise this would be used as a back door for further selectivity based on political considerations.

Difficulties also surround the accurate definition of apolitical transit procedures and their consequences. What will happen to a motorist who does not stick to the letter of the highway code? What about a driver who plans to set out on the transit roads in an inebriated condition? On points such as this it will not be easy to reach a settlement to keep both sides

Bahr and Kohl have a lot of ground to cover still, but a successful conclusion seems to be in sight. Rolf Zundel

(Dle Zeit, 3 December 1971)

pean security conference to begin.

Obviously it is important who delivers the goods first. Mistrust is still rife. The speed at which East-West relations now in the future.

The definitive confirmation of the Berlin settlement by all powers would make it simpler for the Federal government to push through the debates on the Moscow and Warsaw Treatles in the Bundestag.

Differences of opinion about how the whole machinery of the treaty should be end everything will come off at more or less the same time. Soon afterwards it will be difficult to remember that there ever was any bother about it. .

Peking's entry in UN causes turmoil in Asia

Malaysian Prime Minister Tun Razak has been carefully noted by Peking. It is hoped in Kuala Lumpur that friendly relations with China could neutralise the Communist terrorists in Malaysia. Singapore, with its important trade links with China, also voted for the entry of the People's Republic into the United Nations. Foreign Minister Rajaratnam described China's admission to the UN as the greatest fundamental change in the

Since President Ne Win recently spent some time in Peking, Burma too has become reconciled with China and renew-

China a long time ago and abstained in the UN vote but she should soon normalise her relations with Peking.

mal relations with China.

persuade North Vietnamese troops to South Vietnam and Cambodia both fear that the United States could on day leave them in the lurch as it did Taiwan. Both States are completely dependent on

The most dramatic change has occurred in South Korea. Seoul previously wanted nothing at all to do with Communist States. Semi-official Red Cross delegations from South and North Korea are negotiating with each other for the first time. Both sides have stopped bombarding each other with words. President Pak has South Korea plans to establish trading relations with all Communist countries including the People's Republic of China. There is obviously great distrust of America in Seoul. South Korea is now taking the initiative so that she is not caught between two stools if the Americans should ever decide to with-

(Kieler Nachrichten, 1 December 1971)

Bonn Foreign Minister Walter Scheel returned on 30 November from his Scheel sticks out for be-day official visit to the Soviet Union Berlin settlement on arrival Scheel expressed his conviction that the binding link created by this country between a Berlin settlement and mification of the East Bloc treaties was dihout qualification correct". Otherwise it would not have been esible for a Berlin settlement of any and to have been reached at this time. the question of when and how the final taion of the Berlin settlement should be and is something that the Four Powers Il not have to debate among them-

Come what may the Federal Republic quires a settlement of the Berlin Queson before it sets about ratifying the testies with the East Bloc States.

While in Moscow Walter Scheel confired with Communist Party Secretary Brezhnev, Prime Minister Alexei sygin and Foreign Minister Andrei omyko - Scheel will shortly be telling he Cabinet of the results of his talks in

With regard to the forthcoming Nato onference, Scheel stressed the Nato allies build have to hold talks to discuss whether it was already possible to speak a successful Berlin settlement.

this, he said, was a matter for all design and the second republic. The central topic discussed in Moscow the Soviet government's "counter-

Moscow stuck out for a temporal between ratification of the Moscow

Warsaw Treaties by the Bundestag

before ratification and the conclusion of the Berlin settle-

Walter Scheel put forward the suggested compromise that before the ratification procedure was begun the Berlin settlement should be made "complete in content and no longer open to amend-

Foreign Minister Gromyko called the Moscow meeting with his West German counterpart helpful. But he did not give any clue as to how he would expect the 'time link" imposed by the Soviet Union to be put into operation.

The communique on the talks, issued of the "time link".

The most important parts of the communiqué state that both sides are keen to improve further their relationship and that it is desirable for the West German-Soviet treaty to be ratified as soon as possible.

Stress is laid on the significance of the Four-Power agreement on Berlin at which both sides "expressed the hope that the negotiations at present being held in connection with this agreement will soon be successful."

The intention to bring the Federal Republic and German Democratic Re-Europe and hence into the United Na- solution to be found. tions is underlined.

Furthermore the communiqué states that the present situation in Europe is "favourable ground for calling a European security conference".

It was stated that all concerned should "begin the multilateral preparations for this conference as speedily as possible". On the question of the possible reduction of troop strength it was stated that both sides were agreed that such an

could make a decided contribution to the securing of peace in Europe and thereby could lead to lasting relaxation of ten-"Less satisfaction" was expressed, according to German sources in Moscow, on the matter of the repatriation of German families and Soviet citizens with German agreement could be of mutual advantage, nationality living in the Soviet Union. According to Moscow sources Herr Scheel urged his Soviet colleagues to solve this problem once and for all. He underlined to Gromyko the significance of this question for home affairs and handed him a list with 250 sample cases of hardship in which the Soviet authorities had so far refused exit permits. Gromyko simply promised to look into the matter. This is no more than Premier Kosygin promised Willy Brandt last August in Moscow. According to the West German mission in Moscow Kosygin has not yet come up with the promised far-reaching answer. And Egon Bahr, on his visit to Oreanda for talks with the Soviet leaders, also public into the train of detente moves in broached this matter and called for a

(Münchner Merkur, 1 December 1971)

Berlin agreement need not be hindered

Handelsblatt Industriekurier

When the part of the Berlin agree-ment worked out jointly by Bonn, the Berlin senate and East Berlin is available it will be up to the Four Powers to decide where to go from there.

At any rate the Bonn government will have a role to play in this decision as adviser. This is a point people should bear in mind before they accuse the Soviet Union of trying to impose special condi-

The four wartime allies will have to check whether the results of the inter-German negotiations tally with the conditions laid down in the Four-Power umbrella agreement in which many basic details were fully taken care of.

Then they will move on to the signing of the definitive protocol of the Berlin agreement, which is already on hand,

The fact that the Soviet Union is once again insisting on a temporal link between the implementation of the Berlin Agreement and the ratification of the West German-Soviet treaty may be a hindrance and have the appearance of making an inroad into the parliamentary machinery of the Federal Republic. But it is under-

Russia wants to be doubly secure. Bonn Foreign Minister Walter Scheel has countered this request with the suggestion that at the outset the Four Powers should simply declare that the Berlin agreement has been fulfilled and can no longer be amended.

The agreement would then become valid after the ratification of the West German-Soviet Treaty of Moscow. This is a path that can surely be taken by all

(Handelsblatt, 1 December 1971)

Who goes first, is the Kremlin problem

Political business dealings are not so vastly different from any other form of business - everyone wants to have the goods in his hands before he forks out. Thus the Soviet Union considers it better that the Federal Republic should ratify the Moscow Treaty before Moscow finally gives its seal of approval to the talks on

Bonn would rather have it the other way round - Berlin first, Moscow Treaty second. As for Nato, the satisfactory wrapping up of the Berlin problem is a prerequisite for preparations for a Euro-built up are nevertheless not worth getting excessively excited about. Experience has taught us that in the

(Frankfurter Rundschau, 30 November 1971)

No. 505 - 16 December 1971

ges drummed up support for Willy handt's party if, that is, they did not mining one's reputation. But this is now tal at their head, had met members of Iwaria's musical world to discuss the

Three days after these harmonious talks

sout subsidising orchestras in Bavaria

ad promoting contemporary produc-

hans Franz Josef Strauss himself came on

The CSU had invited more than one hudred celebrities ranging from film-star lichi Glas to C.F. von Weizsäcker to sublish contacts with them and hear zir ideas on the party's political ac-

Cultural activities of this type led to a exting with the Writers Association this

hae. Talks with creative and productive

The background is the same in every

se. One of the prime reasons is the is field in recent years by political sponents with their "voter initiatives".

But there is doubtlessly more to it than

M. A certain degree of unrest is slowly

kanning to creep into party ranks after any years of self-satisfaction in which

CSU joyfully observed increased yance felt at being so outstripped in aists are to follow.

think it too right-wing for them.

POLITICS

New leaders come to the fore in East Berlin

There has been a reshuffle of the East State Council has sunk since Ulbricht's I German leadership since last May when Walter Ulbricht was more or less forced to resign the First Secretaryship.

Two men now stand in the spotlight -Ulbricht's successor as First Secretary, 59-year-old Erich Honecker, and Willi Stoph's First Deputy on the Ministerial Council, 56-year-old Horst Sindermann.

Stoph himself, though belonging to the same generation, has receded into the background in recent months, weakened by a persistent kidney disorder.

A meeting of the People's Chamber on 26 November showed the insignificance into which the post of Chairman of the Sick Ulbricht made to return to office

Most countries in the world recognise a person's right to die but even this right is non-existent in the German Democratic Republic.

People attending the recent session of the People's Chamber or following it on television could not avoid feeling that Ulbricht was being forced for political reasons to continue as Chairman of the State Council, a post in which he will in future have neither the physical or political opportunity of influencing decisions. Ulbricht is a sick man and the only question is whether he was already so ill when replaced by Honecker for political reasons or whether he became so ill because he no longer had any power.

The fact that he no longer exercises power was finally indicated by Otto Gotsche's forced resignation.

Gotsche, the Secretary of the State Council and Ulbricht's closest personal colleague, is the German version of Proskrybitchev, Stalin's closest colleague. Whereas Proskrybitchev disappeared without trace, Gotsche was allowed to resign and devote himself to writing. He owes that to Krushchev and the de-Stalinisation process.

It makes no difference politically, of course. Ulbricht has been publicly declared powerless. He is now under supervision and not only medical supervision.

But why did Ulbricht have to carry out this last duty to the party? The answer is simple. Soviet foreign policy has now embarked upon a course that is as dangerous to the East German Socialist Unity Party (SED) as it is for the

The Soviet Union believes that it is necessary to demonstrate the unanimity of the past and present leadership of the SED. This is all the more because the prime aim is to conceal the fact that the GDR and the SED still only fulfil the functions of Soviet foreign policy.

Honecker, Ulbricht's successor as party head, has also been elected a member of the State Council. He has therefore outlined his expectations of the future even though he is only a simple member of this body and, according to protocol, him on his birthday was published to less powerful than Stoph who was appointed deputy to the Chaiman of the State Council, Honecker would like to meet Willy Brandt one day as an equal just as them. Only occasionally would readers Brezhnev, who is not a member of the Soviet government, spoke as an equal with Pompidou in Paris.

As the intention is so plain the only question is what conditions Willy Brandt Brezhnev's last visit to East Berlin. will make in the interest of Berlin and the re-election even though East German law reserves full powers to the holder.

(Der Tagesspiegel, 27. November 1971)

The re-elected Ulbricht, bound by the constitution to propose the man to fill the post of Chairman of the Ministerial Council, sat as a lonely man on the benches reserved for the State Council after the exertions of his twenty-minute

Erich Honecker, First Secretary of the Socialist Unity Party (SED), strode to the speaker's rostrum and, though not authorised by the constitution to put forward the candidate nor acting as the SED's Parliamentary Chairman, proposed to the applause of the House that Willi Stoph should once again be entrusted with the formation of the government.

This scene did not last two minutes but it showed who really is in power in the German Democratic Republic. Was this the first indication that Honecker himself wants to be Chairman of the State

The post is no more than a facade under the ailing Ulbricht as was revealed by the election of the 77-year-old former Social Democrat Friedrich Ebert, a member of the SED politburo, as First Deputy to the Chairman of the State Council.

Ebert, no longer cherishing any ambitions concerning political power but the father figure required for the post by the SED, will have the duty of fulfilling the representative obligations of the Chairman of the State Council in Ulbricht's

To complete the coordination of the new State Council with the new SED leadership, Honecker has had himself voted on to the State Council along with sixty-year-old Paul Werner, head of the Central Committee Security Department and one of Honecker's closest colleagues.

Some observers had already written off the veteran revolutionary Walter Ul-bricht. He had left the party chairmanship in May and a month later the People's

In view of his health at the age of 78,

many people thought it only a matter of time before he would willingly or un-ment, that of Chairman of the State

nothing more of this sick, old man.

The agit prop functionaries allowed scarcely one line about Ulbricht to pass

learn that the Chairman of the State

Council had sent someone his congratulations or expressed his sympathy. He only

The opposition that Ulbricht met in the place of Ulbricht.

Council.

Verner, like Honecker an Ulbricht protegé and for years a rival of Honecker's within the party, is today the second most important man in the SED leadership after Honecker.

Like Honecker, he prefers to appear straightforward and objective. Like flonecker, his relations with the intelligentsia are governed by a subconscious inferiority complex.

Both are experts in manipulating the governing apparatus, both are absolutely loyal to the Soviet Union. "The test of loyalty to Marxism-Leninism is our relationship to the USSR," Werner once

Though Willi Stoph has once again taken over the chalrmanship of the Ministerial Council, it has been said maliciously for some time now that he is a man with a future behind him.

But even the ailing Stoph is indispensable to the SED. Long before the new style on objectivity began to make its breakthrough in the post-Ulbricht era, Stoph was the one member of the SED leadership to take an objective, realistic view of the GDR's position, particularly its economic position. Pragmatist Stoph has little time for Ulbricht's theory of the Socialist People's Community.

Since the May 1971 reshuffle in the SED leadership Stoph has had another First Deputy alongside economics specialist Alfred Neumann.

The new man is Horst Sindermann, the First Secretary of the SED in the Halle district which he has built up into a model Socialist district.

Sindermann is the second most important political figure in the governing apparatus next to Stoph and is thought of as his possible successor. Popular like few other SED functionaries, he embodied a new style of leadership even when a branch secretary.

The Honecker-Verner leadership trans in the party apparatus and the Stoph-Sindermann team in the government has a lot in common. Within the space of a few months they have developed a new style of leadership that indirectly con-tains the most violent criticism of Ubricht that has ever become known.

All four of them are sober and object tive. They seek to establish contact with the population and no longer concess difficulties where these are evident.

They seem to have realised that the success of their policies largely depends on ending or at least improving the constant supply difficulties and on departing once and for all from costly economic offorts of the Ulbricht era tobe To give one's vote to the CDU/CSU, self-sufficient vis-à-vis the Federal Respecially the CSU, was tantamount to

A symptomatic feature of this policy is change. The CSU is tired of being the decline of the influence of tech nocrats in the party and governing apparatus. Günter Mittag, the man remains the party and governing apparatus. Günter Mittag, the man remains the party and governing apparatus. sponsible for economic policy in the SED journalists and all those celebrities that politburo and the subject of much critic | 2 "society". ism in recent months, was not re-elected Courting the sympathy essential to this to the State Council. to the State Council.

The departure from Mittag's policy hegan a few months ago when it was decided to use the GDR's Western currency reserves for the import of consumer articles as well as investment goods and end the costly build-up of a consumer ament situation. goods production that would be independent of the West.

These decisions more than anything else reflect the change of the political situation that is gradually beginning to assert itself in inter-German relations thanks to the Ostpolitik conducted by the Brandt-Scheel government.

The new leaders in East Berlin in longer fear being exposed to economic embargo measures on the part of the Federal Republic and believe the time is now come to shake off the effects of the Annamaric Dohen

(Frankfurter Rundschau, 29 November 1971)

Written off Ulbricht makes a comeback

Chamber surprisingly elected the new party chairman, Erich Honecker, Chairman of the National Defence Council in GDR's public opinion polisters found that Ulbricht is today more popular than ever before among East Germans.

There is a simple reason for this. Honecker's course is felt by the populawillingly give up his third major appointtion to be hard, harder at any rate than people today remember the many years lor an active Ulbricht.

The most appropriate and most merciful moment for this seemed to be the Ulbricht is the great creator of the State and its wise father. The propaganda re-election of the Chairman of the State of the earlier period also did everything it Council prescribed by the constitution could to present Ulbricht's human and after the elections to the People's Champaternal image.

Whether he wanted to or not, SED boss Ulbricht was already seen as a pen-Honecker had to propose that the grand sioner comfortably sitting out the last old man should once again be entrusted years of his life on the veranda of his with the chairmanship of the State datcha in the exclusive Wandlitz, just Ulbricht stood at the speaker's rostrum, A picture taken of him last June when though not as the active fighter he once his political heirs came to congratulate was. He was still feeling the effects of his illness, he looked tired and read from show the population that it could expect notes in a weak voice.

His final departure from the political stage has been postponed for the time being but nobody knows for how long. But the entire party executive and senior deputies know that the spoils have already been divided.

Deputies in the People's Chamber applauded for minutes on end after Ulbricht had been re-elected and the President of the People's Chamber, Götting, wished politburo for the first time may have him "much creative power and long years been overcome from another sector. The of good health".

All this might have been a genuine expression of sympathy but it does not alter the fact that East Berlin has long ago made provisions in the event of Ulbricht being unable to continue in office for reasons of death or sickness. It is rumoured in official circles in East

Berlin that Prime Minister Willi Stoph sport and rejoiced that there were next would become Chairman of the State no issues leading to doubts among its Council in this case and continue to the party is no longer as thick-skinned thinks constant intellectual scorn as it exercise some of the duties of his present Horst Sindermann, up to now the Hends, Many of the more fastidious imbers are hurt by the fact that their Prime Minister's First Deputy, is expected to succeed him to the post of Chairman ly with its right-wing views is being of the Ministerial Council. ly ignored in theoretical discussions But the balance of power would be changed if there were to be a new the CSU's broadly based campaign to governing troiks consisting of Stoph # blish contacts with all sectors of State Council, Sindermann in the Ministerial Council and Honecker in the National Defence Council. The shift would not be due to the cil being the same man as the party head but to the fact that Sindermann and Honecker have closs personal ties going back to their time in the leadership of the FDJ, the East German youth organisa-Stoph would run the danger of iso. lation in a situation of this type. Television viewers seeing his tired, unmoving face and observers noticing how with impressed he was by the deputies who were congratulating him were unable to rid themselves of the idea that he was counting up his friends at that moment.

There cannot have been many. H. U. Kersten (Lübecker Nachrichten, 28 November 1971) CSU attempts to change its image unions were started to counter accusations that the party was a party represent-

Suddenische Zeinung. Similarly, contacts were sought with the intellectual world. Suspicions that the CSU has nothing in common with poets The last election campaign seemed to show that the intellectual world in and other thinkers should now be refuted on an official level and during informal in country was completely committed It was plain from the very outset that withe Social Democratic Party. Writers, testre people and even television com-

these moves would not remain unanswered. Independent writers and artists have no parliamentary lobby and cannot afford to ignore the offer by a large political party to discuss their problems with them

Political differences - Dieter Lattmann, the head of the Writers Association, is a committed Social Democrat should play no part here. The fact that Strauss' social moves are meeting with a great response is even less of a surprise.

Anyone knowing actors, artists and even writers will have never considered them all to be intellectuals, not to mention left-wing intellectuals. If they are not altogether apolitical, they tend to adont a conservative view or at least listen understandingly to their managers when they explain how important it is to show themselves with the politicians in power, whatever their party.

It is therefore relevant to ask whether the CSU already considers as successful the casy establishment of these contacts with their doubtlessly beneficial effects for the party's image and future election campaigns or whether it sees the contacts as the actual start to a long overdue 'intellectual rearmament".

There are some indications of realefforts being made here. The talks with the artists and writers would have scarce been possible without the help of a number of students who had been engaged for the leadership by Max Streibl and brought a breath of fresh air into the party organisation - and not only in their theoretical justification for these negotia-

DIE WELT

The Bavarian Junge Union - the party's youth organisation — is carrying on a discussion of the basic Christian Socialist principles. A week-long seminar is being held on the subject in early January. The party's own Hanns Seidel Foundation is also trying more and more to improve the standard of its work.

People holding responsible posts in the party will realise that meetings with writers and artists or even party chat with footballer Gerd Müller, Bayern Munich's famous striker, will not change the CSU's intellectual image. The only question is whether they really want this basic and long-overdue change.

Grass-roots discussions

The CSU will only be able to discard its anti-intellectual image when it accepts discussion of basic principles at grassroots level over and above the debate about local government reform in Bav-

It will only be able to discard its image when it manages to attract more than a few outsiders who are prepared to reexamine views that the party fondly adheres to and when critics both within and outside of the party are not suspected of being a pernicious influence from the very outset.

The whole atmosphere within the party must be radically altered. If the present activities turn out to be no more than a way of averting this necessary change, it would have been better if they had never been started., Herbert Riehl-Heyse

(Süddeutsche Zeitung, 30 November 1971)

West German Communists hold first party conference

The first party congress held by West German Communists since the DKI' was founded in the spring of 1969 took place in an atmosphere of self-praise with a little self-criticism and bursts of rhythmic applause at every appropriate opportunity.

A symbolic embrace between leader Kurt Bachmann and Max Reimann, the head of the KPD before it was banned, showed the six hundred and more delegates in Düsseldorf's Congress Hall, resplendent with red flags and dominated by a giant photograph of a worker, that the DKP has now received the blessing of

But it was when Reimann was elected honorary president of the DKP that the unanimity of the congress was broken. Jörg Goldberg, a young white-collar worker from Cologne, was the only delegate to yote against the former DKP leader. He explained that he had nothing against Reimann personally but objected to the DKP having an honorary president.

The party congress, intended to demonstrate the unanimity of the 33,410 DKP members, did not spend any time discussing the 44-point programme for the party's future strategy.

These had been discussed previously by factory and local groups according to the Communist principle of democratic centralism (now called inner-party democracy) and the finishing touches had been provided by party headquarters in

In what passed as a discussion at the party congress the DKP cell within the Ford works in Cologne explained how workers could be won over to the party. Point one of their programme was full pay for the Monday before Lent, a public holiday in that area.

Whenever speakers met with little response from grass-roots level, the DKP executives would read out greetings telegrams from North Vietnam or the metalworkers strike front and be sure of thunderous applause.

Guests from allied parties were also invited to the speaker's rostrum out of turn in order to inspire some enthusiasm. Arvad Pelshe, a politburo member from Moscow, was greeted with persistent chants of Dnizhbu as he handed over a oust of Lenin.

Deputy leader Herbert Mies lifted the bronze head as if it were a football trophy and his eyes became damp as the delegates, ranging from young girls in minis to veteran Communists with greying temples, raised their fists and broke into the Internationalc.

There was a repeat of this ritual when Albert Norden, the chief propagandist of the East German Socialist Unity Party, presented the DKP with a plush tapestry bearing a portrait of the former Communist leader Ernst Thälmann.

DKP bosses and guests like Pelshe and Norden disappeared to their carefully isolated rooms after their exertions. Crates of champagne were dragged into the rooms of the upper classes while the run-ot-the-mill party member queued for

(Süddeutsche Zeitung, 27 November 1971)

Sixty per cent want unity

ety is without doubt one of the salts of this unrest. Talks with trade

ccording to an Allensbach survey most people in West Germany would the to see the Germanics rounited. Sixty cent would like to live in an alivided State with the people of the Thirty per cent said that this was no high really worth striving for. Ten per said they had not made up their totalled 3,500. ads. The survey was ordered by the lonn government. " (Die Welt, 26 November 1971) the party, outlined the basic strategic aim: "The main thing is to obtain in 1973 the percentage of the votes necessary to make Willy Brandt and Walter Scheel yesterday's men." The main energies of Deutsche Union

the head of the Bayarian branch, claims, forces of a reformist system-destroying nature can also be found within the CDU.

But as members fear that the CDU/CSU

will not be hard enough in questions of Ostpolitik and social services policy Deut-conservative corrective.

are therefore directed against the govern-Deutsche Union (DU) recently held its first "Deutschlandkongress" since ing coalition of Social and Free Democrats in Bonn. The Federal states are no the party was established last June, no more than subordinate fields of battle. more than six months ago.
Three hundred and fifty party mem-Members are united in their fight against the treaties with Russia and

Poland and in their criticism of the FDP, vicinity, crowded into the plain banquetthe parly many of them once belonged to. ing hall of the Milheim Stadthalle for the Most of the party looked on the Christian Democrats as their major ally Journalist William S. Schlamm deliverwhen the DU was founded but scepticism ed the opening address from the stage has now spread because, Dietrich Bahner,

DU members express doubts

about CDU

that had been specially decorated in black, red and gold, the colours of the German flag.

But is the new party flourishing or is it on the verge of extinction? Deputy leader Rudolf Wollner from Wiesbaden

bers, most of them from the immediate

Local branches of the DU have been set sche Union will remain at its side as a his beer or coffee. up so far in North Rhine-Westphalia. Lower Saxony and Bavaria, he stated, adding that branches in Hesse and Rhine-land Palatinate would be set up on the weekend immediately following the con-

announced a number of

Groups should have been formed in Baden-Württemberg, Schleswig-Holstein, Hamburg, Bremen and the Saar by January 1972. Subordinate groups were being set up everywhere at local district level, he said, and membership now

Kurt Meyer, a member of the executive of the North Rhine-Westphalia branch of

SPD/FDP drop two points

(Die Weit, 29 November 1971)

tober; according to a survey conducted .

The Bonn government dropped two by the Emnid Institute of Bielefeld. Legislation considered the service of the population considered the service of SPD/FDP coalition "very good" or the previous month and the FDP im-"good" in September, only fifty per cent proved its position by one point, moving gave those favourable judgments in Oc-

(Die Welt, 26 November 1971)

Intricacies of holography explained to photographers

Cologne once again pressed foward its claim to be a photographic centre of international importance when Nobel Prizewinner Dennis Gabor, a Hungarian now living in London, explained the origin of holography,

His short talk was given at a reception given by the Photographical Association to celebrate its twentieth anniversary and present physicist Gabor and stage designer Josef Syoboda with the cultural prizes awarded annually by the Associa-

The Association considers itself to be a type of photographic academy dealing with subjects ranging from physical and technical research and scientific application to documentation, information, pictorial journalism and artistic and journal-

it is also proud of the fact that the winner of this year's award was later found worthy of the Nobel Prize. Gerhard Schröder, the head of the Association described the coincidence as something that would not occur again for at

But what is holography actually? The people attending the reception in Cologne were given the opportunity of studying a practical example among the photo-graphic exhibitions in the city's Gürze-

An apparatus had been set up in the hall to project a portrait of the prizewinner on to a screen by means of a laser beam and special lens system.

Though beamed on to a two-dimensional surface, the picture appeared threedimensional. It looked as if it was hovering freely in the space behind the screen. Perspective was so sharp it could

A hologram is therefore a pictoral representation grasping the whole of the object. Dennis Gabor chose the Greek word holos - whole - for his discovery.

The natural perspective is retained on the screeen as the hologram divides the the gid of his instruments.

Frankfurter Allaemeine

pictoral information into three dimensions with the help of the laser beam, flowever much anyone looking at the picture changes his position, observing it from below or from the side, the realistic effect is retained.

This faithful reproduction of spatial characteristics, thought at first to be no more than a photographic gimmlek, opens up new and previously unknown paths for the future.

The new process can be used when examining materials, analysing stress, and producing transistors and circuits. It will also be of future benefit for the threedimensional film and television.

Physicist Dennis Gabor sounded optimistic in Cologne when he spoke of the possibilities offered by holography in the field of creative art.

Gabor said that it was particularly remarkable that he had received the Association's award along with stage designer Josef Svoboda who had extended the stage's opportunities of expression by means of modern multivision and background projection with the aid of photography.

Gabor believes that his own technical and physical invention could act as a medium opening up new areas to art.

He chatted of the procedure leading up to his invention with a type of pleasant understatement that made out his findings to be no more than the chance result of coincidences, accidents and strakes of luck.

He did not invent holography while shaving one morning, as he said, but during work with an electron microscope. He was unable to forgive himself for not developing this microscope that other researchers had constructed partly with

Stage design by Josef Svoboda for a Frankfurt theatre

Gabor published the basic principle of holography as early as 1948 at a time when he had only inadequate sources of light available to him. The ideal source was found in 1960 when the constant laser beam was invented, opening up surprising new fields of application in research, industry and, Gabor believes,

The Photographical Association was established in Cologne in 1951. Gerhard Schröder has been its president since 1954 and the Association has awarded its cultural prizes since 1959.

The awards are greatly respected throughout the world as they are not prizes for photographers or rewards for outstanding photographic work. Scientific and technical work has its place alongside creative photography.

The Association's practical activities have continually increased in range and importance in the twenty years of its existence. Work can be divided into four

The picture section consists of practical photographers who deal mainly with technical and artistic problems, arranging meetings and international discussions. One of the most recent was a congress debate the future of photography.

The research section consists of scient ists who report on the results of their young scientists for work in the field of whieved earlier with "force-feeding". photography.

The historical section is trying to push forward plans for setting up central archives for the history of photographym Munich's Stadtmuseum.

The medical section deals with the opportunities offered by photography in treatment and diagnostic work.
The Dr Erich Salomon Prize was awarded this year for the first time, Salomon was one of the outstanding press photographers of the twenties and thirties who nelped found a new style of historial picture documentation in Berlin and other centres of European politics. Pass It is precisely because she does not photography has now become an estab innch into a great campaign and does lished part of contemporary documents tion and information because of Sales thile satisfying the highest artistic demon's work.

Phtographer Robert Lebeck received the award on behalf of the Stern photo graphic team

(Frankfurter Allgemeine Zellung

Indo-American folksong.

plut of her repertoire on her present, but guest appearance in West Germany Frankfurt's Jahrhunderthalle, is a shatbing condemnation of man's inhuman-blo man precisely because no threat is ctred, no polemics are thundered out, milt is pinned on anyone and no one tates himself to the position of moral for this sphere of her musical offering the said years ago by way of the protection of the song "The Dove" applies: "War is a mistake. This is withing Man must say without qualifi-Mon. It is not possible to set degrees by

This sentiment is not obvious from the

Both lithographs from the series displayed at the exhibition Graphik im Haus Dom-

produced by Klaus Moritz remind visitors produced by Klaus Moritz remind visitors to the exhibition that modern applied art, worth 8,000, awarded by the Freie with the exhibition that modern applied art, worth 8,000, awarded by the Freie with the with the worth 8,000, awarded by the Freie with the exhibition that modern applied art, worth 8,000, awarded by the Freie with the exhibition that modern applied art, worth 8,000, awarded by the Freie with the exhibition that modern applied art, worth 8,000, awarded by the Freie with the exhibition that modern applied art, worth 8,000, awarded by the Freie with the exhibition that modern applied art, which is the exhibition that modern applied art which is the exhibition that modern applied are the exhibition that modern applied are the exhibition that modern applied art which is the exhibition that modern applied are the exhibition that the exhibition that the exhibition that the exhibition especially poster art, is unthinkable with this play, which the author calls "a out lithography.

The dolly lion and dog's Rolls-Royce inviting people to the exhibition can be inviting people to the exhibition can be bought for ten Marks. The prints exhibit ed are also for sale at prices ranging from forty to nine hundred Marks.

ENTERTAINMENT

Folksinger Judy Collins wows Frankfurt

Judy Collins around in his day!

Gheorghe Zamfir, the Rumanian pipes-of-Pan player opened the show with his group (cymbals, clarinet, fiddle and bass).

His own instrument consists of twenty wooden tubes and produces the kind of sound that unfortunately many groups

with a mission to put across folk culture

The audience was keen to show its appreciation and the applause showed that in its opinion the Swedish fiddlers

Björn Staabi and Pers Hans were far from outdone by the Rumanian pipe player, even though this music must have been quite unknown to the public in Frank-in the Anglo-American world the folk-song as a fashionable thing now has such a firm place that it is not surprising that a popular duo like Simon and Carfunkel

There was the Anglo-Scottish group

with the traditional name "Magna Carta"

(which has been in existence eighteen

It may be fair to say that the singing of stone's brilliant mastery of the most diverse stringed instruments (guitar, sitar

Johnstone was good enough for Johnny Dankworth and the Royal Philharmonic

Orchestra, London, to record with him. at any rate. The charm and appeal of his playing helped make this concert one of the highlights of the present Frankfurt

Wolfgang Sandner

The amount may also be paid in your country's currency

ORDER FORM

I / We hereby subscribe to THE GERMAN TRIBUNE at the following rates

(Underline whatever applicable

Please return the completed order form to:

THE GERMAN TRIBUNE . FRIEDRICH REINECKE VERLAG GMBH

23 Schone Aussicht, 2 Hamburg 76 * Federal Republic of Germany

Dautsche Marks U.S. Dollars Pounds Sterling

(Frankfurter Allgemeine Zeitung, für Deutschland, 25 November 1971)

nave numerous imitators.

announcer told us).

and mandoline).

concert season.

It's a miracle how a song can find its words for all her songs and yet her love songs through chaos to impart simplicity," said Judy Collins about the song humanitarian idea that never lapses into iy," said Judy Collins about the song humanitarian id "Winter Sky", thus giving us two clues to sentimentality, her relationship to the folksong.

She sings with

This song was produced by its own mergy making it possible to create it by a trio consisting of piano, bass and without the normal procedures of compogion. Judy Collins does not do a great al of composing, and when she composes she does so to a certain extent effortlessly.

The second clue to Judy Collins and e folksong concerns the musical language itself. Plain and simple melodies sithout any great adornment, naive and mentionally uncomplicated are typical of the songs Judy Collins sings with a held in Oberkochen in July 1971 to degree of musical sense that seems selfoident with her immaculately pure voice. Judy, 32, has twelve years of professonal singing experience behind her, but research, maintain international links and it is only in the past three years that she award the annual Robert Luther Prize in its reached the position that others have

Her past life is not likely to arouse any telings of envy — poliomyelitis at welve, tuberculosis at the age of 23 and a liked marriage are just the most evident points in a life that all in all can scarcely e described as trouble-free.

She does not need to put on an act then she describes herself as A Maid of Constant Sorrow and says that she has koked at life from Both Sides Now or ings of bitter experiences in love.

And the outspoken pacifism and poliial involvement that crop up in half her thile satisfying the highest artistic de-tands that she has achieved something at generations of so-called protest singand "involved" musicians tried to whieve in vain.

She has managed to combine and aconcile an aesthetically pleasing sound with a deep feeling for humanity. Judy ollins is the Florence Nightingale of the

Her "Vietnam Love Song", the high-thing this to anything else."

First time lucky

Deter Härtling's first play Gilles has camt him the Gerhart Hauptmann

Stume piece" concerns the French Inclution of 1789 as seen by an eighty Farold actor. A number of theatres have pressed their willingness to premiere the Which appeared last year in Goverts alag (which has now been swallowed up the Fischer publishing house).

(Stuttgerter Zeitung, 24 November 1971)

A scene from Jean Anouilh's N'éveillez pas madame produced in Hamburg

Great cast in a disappointing Anouilh play in Hamburg

lisabeth Flickenschildt, Will Quadflieg L and Hermann Schomberg brought a touch of the Gründgens era back to the Deutsches Schauspielhaus in Hamburg. The Hamburg audience gave them a rapturous round of applause at the start and many were moved to see again the old guard from the good old days of the Anouilh's N'éveillez pas mulame (entitled in German "Wecken Sie Madame nicht auf") was not such a resounding months, and not just seven as the Chris Simpson and Glen Stuart tends towards the decadent and derivative, but this would not be true of Davey John-

Henry Higgins. Most women find him quite adorable. But Julien's passion is centred round the theatre. This causes the breakup of his two marriages and his family life with his two children.

The plot is evolved by means of flashbacks, insertion and superimpositions. Anouilh is a master craftsman in

He has Julien and his wives rehearse

The same of the state of the st

Nevertheless this premiere of Jean success as might have been expected.

Once again Anouilh takes one of his old themes, theatre within the theatre. The central character is Julien, a theatrical director in Paris. The scene all the way through is his stage - and the wings where rehearsals take place, which do change.

Julien is a highly-strung, nervous theatre fanatic, a tyrant, old divorcee and three plays on the stage, a Russian love-story, a village pastoral idyli and William Shakespeare's Hamlet. This gives the actors the opportunity to slip into several new roles. The interest grows from the conflict between reality and stage role. For two acts this "Change-partners"

game is a pièce rose, but in the last act it becomes a pièce noire. At the end Julien is a broken man, sitting on Hamlet's seat. He is alone, a failure.

Anouilh's characters are left alone. They are successful, but success does not bring them happiness. The pessimism of life expressed in Anouilli's work is romantic and thus scarecely tangible, so that it fails to touch the audiences of

What corresponded to the general feeling for life back in the fifties, Anouilh's great period, today seems like a claim that can never be met in a world that has become more fragmented. It is not our failure nor our experience of loneliness that Anouilh is describing.

It is the cast we have to thank for the surprisingly good moments of this even-ing's drama. Elisabeth Flickenschild played Julien's mother who stifles her fear of growing old with a veneer of gaiety and grandiose postures.

Will Quadflieg as Julien was supreme in the way he portrayed coldness, irony and nervousness. An actor and actress who really held the stage.

The two wives of Julien were well set-off against each other. Gertraud Jesserer played the simple country girl with Maresa Hörbiger as the pert hussy.

But it was Hermann Schomberg in the role of the prompter who was really who loves to trot out tales of his adventures with women in years gone by. He is a bit of a loner and rather despises the world. He has cooked up his own

The prompter, Tonton, is not part of the action. He nestles up with the audience. And as for the audience, even the back row could have no complaints this time, as voice projection was ex-

Willi Schmidt's mise-en-scene is equally polished and he was also responsible for costume design which was quite respect-Erika Brenken

(Hannoversche Allgemeine, 15 November 1971)

A Thomas Bayrle Lithograph

ithographers of the world, place flowers on his tomb." Karl Fred Dahmen, a painter and professor at the Munich Academy of Creative Art, demanded of his colleagues on the bicentenary of the birth of Alois Senefelder, the inventor of lithography.

Thumbing through the programme of art exhibitions currently being held in the Federal Republic, you will find that lithographers are only too pleased to honour the inventor of lithography. Ex-

Lithographers honour Master Senefelder

in Karlsruhe, Munich, Offenbach and

An exhibition in Frankfurt's Haus Dornbusch organised by Christian Goldberg also lays flowers on Senefelder's . Twenty-eight artists ranging from Horst Antes to Mac Zimmermann are exhibiting 55 of their works alongside a lithographed landscape produced by the

The painstakingly prepared catalogue reveals that the stone engraved by Senefelder with the landscape is now kept in Munich's Deutsches Museum because of its rarity value as probably the only lithostone artistically fashioned by Senefelder. For the two hundredth anniversary of his birth a lithographic firm transferred the drawing on to a second lithostone and printed 220 copies.

Senefelder, born in Prague on 6 November 1771 could never even have dreamed of the respect that would be paid him when as an actor and playwright in Munich in 1799 he invented a method to reproduce his scripts and music quickly

This opened up to the painters and cartoonists of his time unexpected and paint-brush. varied opportunities of expression that hibitions devoted to him can now be seen could not be gained from the usual graphic techniques of woodcutting and etching.

Senefelder's revolutionary invention at a time when museums were founded and the first public art exhibitions were held heraided the democratisation of art which has reached its peak today in the pop art motto of "art for all".

The exhibition in Haus Dornbusch prompts visitors to turn to the history and technique of this most modern of the classical graphic methods, colour lithographies by Paul Wunderlich, Pfeiffer-Watenpuhl, Bargheer, Rudolf Hausner, Bernhard Jäger and Christian Kruck the most interesting items are the eight Senefelder Anniversary prints including an amusing montage by Dahmen called Griss Gott, Meister Senefelder! and based on the Complete Text Book of Stone Printing published by Senefelder in Explaining his print, Dahmen stated that Senefelder's homeland was green and sometimes very hairy and he tried to express this by the use of intensive green hues and a tuft of the black hairs from a

Pop posters with art nouveau elements

Friedrich Gross' Monstrum humanum.

Cirista Spatz (Frankfurier Rundschau, 17 November 1971)

more interested in the communications systems employed by just been opened.

on show are signal

drums from Nigeria,

Mexican mussel and

snall trumpets, knotted ropes of the Incas

and messenger rods from Australia. The children were given the special treat of being allowed to play

the instruments themselves and they often

did this more successfully than adults.

EDUCATION

New ways to attract the young to take an interest in museums

hildren can do it too," Paul Klee Once said referring to painting, drawing and other creative activities. Children can see — and often more penetratingly and accurately than adults.

But this talent must be developed like any other talent. And what better place is there for this than a museum with all its Considerations of this sort led to schemes where museums opened their doors to children. Experiments started almost simultaneously in many areas throughout the world.

During the course of a visit to the United States Dr Brigitte Menzel, the driving force behind the "Junior Muscheme at Dahlem's Ethnological Museum, discussed a number of ideas with the heads of some museum educational departments and studied the results of their work. The Junior Museum, opened last year, benefited from her findings.

Visits of school classes to museums have long been customary in Berlin as elsewhere. This work has been intensified since 1946 and new methods have been

The old-style guided tours have now been replaced by a conversation or dialogue between art teachers and chil- films. Many of these exhibits could be dren. Berlin has gone one step further. copied in the free model-making classes The same care is still taken of the organised.

priceless exhibits but the way young Older children are people are introduced to them has chang-

Children experience things in a different way from adults. Their approach is foreign peoples and more direct. If they are to grasp anything, an exhibition devot-they must grasp it in the physical sense — ed to this subject has they must be able to touch it.

That is why the new Ethnological Amongst the items Museum set up a Junior Museum where the large glass cases can be easily opened and closed. In the middle there is a large carpet where the children can sit while talking with the art teachers.

Every exhibit discussed can be picked up and closely examined. The carpet is also there to guarantee a soft landing for any items dropped. But the children are usually so careful that little harm is done.

The room also contains a library corner with literature suitable for young people interested in the museum. Next door there is a large painting and modelling room with movable tables and chairs. wash basins, cupboards, materials, tools, a cloakroom and facilities for showing

To make the Junior Museum as attractive as possible from the very outset, the first exhibition dealt with Prairle Indians. Almost all children are interested in Indians and they were now able to see head-dresses, pipes of peace, weapons, moccasins, jewellery and other items they only knew about before from books or

One of the world's top ten

The Frankfurter Allgemeine Zeitung

is the paper of the businessman.

the scientist, and the politician, and indeed of everyone who matters in the Federal Republic.

For anyone wishing to penetrate the German market.

the Frankfurter Aligemeine Zeitung is an essential with its authority.

scope and influence.

Frankfurter Allgemeine

One of the current courses is "Colour Shadow Play". The technical construction of the figures used in a Javanese shadow theatre is examined and explained. All the thirteen to sixteen-year-olds taking part in the course then try to make similar figures of their own. By the time the course ends the children will have produced all the figures necessary for a Siamese fairy tale which will then be Frankfurter Allgemeine of the museum's exhibits.

This reveals the social and therapeutic aspects of the work. Getting to know the other children, joining in the pleasure taken by a group in its creative activity and conforming to the necessary organisation are all factors that count.

place during the afternoon, giving children of kindergarten age and older some sort of initial contact with ethnological objects. They also give children the opportunity of trying out for themselves the techniques involved in the production

The ante-room to the Junior Museum contains a poster announcing "C'hildren see, paint and act pictures" obviously produced by a child's hand, it is here that the children attending the art gallery courses can draw, paint or act whatever ideas they get when looking at a picture.

Art educationalist Dietrich Bieber shows his lively class a different picture every time. Sometimes he chooses the work and sometimes the children do. There is then a lively discussion about the

Observational talent

Bieber offers few explanations but tries instead to lead the children to valid conclusions. That is not all that difficult as children often have an extremely pronounced observational talent.

Works by Frans Hals, Rubens, Jan Steen, Petrus Christus and Roger van der Weyden have featured in the lessons so far. It is now the turn of Giordano's Archangel Michael.

A cute little six-year-old called Verena is the first to comment: "That's an angel and he's killing a man and there's a monster..."

"A wolf," Tim interposes. But Verena cannot believe it is a wolf, claiming, "You cart see something like a horn!"

The situation gradually becomes clear.

The animal is a sinister dragon and its tail is curled around one of the three fallen

Children looking at Roger van der Weyden's Archangel Michael with medical authorities over this issue.

Illustrated guide books appear for every new exhibition to help teachers prepare for a visit by their class to the museum. The courses already mentioned take

Tim, a doctor's son, adds, "You ca undervest. Underneath you can see & feally untenable findings. body - and his belly button! Tim, min expertly, states, "He is dressed so light in order to fly more easily."

"And so he doesn't sweat," Ymen

The children take a long time discusi why the one man is being killed by Michael and why he is being banishs to

"Perhaps he did something to be friend," Thilo suggests. One of the olis suddenly notice that the man speared is St Michael also has wings, adding that its probably not a human being but the deal in human form. They also notice that s Michael is not having to strain himself a he kills the devil.

"It must be difficult to stand on a writhing man," Verena says but Thile puts the matter right: "Acrobats in the circus can do it."

And St Michael is an angel, He can also

The children go into the hall also looking at the painting. No group consist of more than fifteen children so that every one of them can be given attention. Great store is placed on mixing child from differing social backgrounds unobtrusive though important aspect of

Sometimes children from working class backgrounds whose parents have never been to a museum show great enthusiasm and produce surprisingly good palities.

Talent, powers of obversation and linguistic expression can be aroused by museum work. Courses often have a specific therapeutic purpose. Blind con dren or the pupils of schools for the backward can often be helped.

The museum's public relations work for these courses is broadly based. The pres, radio and television are informed. Personal letters are sent to the older cours members and particular consideration is paid to the schools and youth bureaux that already have contact with the Museum.

Everything is at the planning stage at the moment. A large numbers of ques-tions still have to be answered, including questions of finance. Essentially it is a continuation of past efforts by museum to try to gain a place in the minds of yours Karla Höcker!

MEDICINE

Medical profession lambasts strophantine theory

Frantfurter Allgemeine

Dr Berthold Kern of Stuttgart was unable to provide any firm proof of the correctness of his controversial and much-discussed treatment for heart satients when he addressed a recent cientific congress in Heidelberg.

But he told the seventy doctors, pharmacologists and medical statisticians attending the congress that he was consheed doctors were making a mistake if they refused to adopt his method of testing patients with strophantine tablets to prevent fatal heart attacks.

Dr Kern has long demanded discussions But it is only now that Professor Gott-(Photo: Orgal-Kibre) and Schettler, the head of the Associahumans. The man whom St Michaella ton for Internal Medicine, has managed struck with his spear screams fearfully.

Thilo comments, "You can see all i much talks and persuade them to take

After an absolutely fair and objective even see his tonsils." Verena is especially discussion the meeting ended in a interested in what the angel is wearing complete defeat for Dr Kern who is fast The boys believe he has a pullover orbit becoming a tragic figure as he clings Verena sees that it must be some typed ordulously to his subjective and scienti-

> Kem was unable to provide any new that from which doctors could judge the success of his treatment. Professors Koller of Mainz and Überla of Ulm and other statisticians attending the meeting rejected these old figures, describing them as completely unsatisfactory. Kern has never supplied data dividing his patients into sexes or age groups. But these figures are required to obtain the so-called expectancy figures that indicate whether any cases of death could actually have been averted by means of his strophantine tablet treatment.

Professor Koller stated that between 800 and 1,000 of the fifteen thousand patients treated by Dr Kern for an average period of three and a half years must now be dead - this is the average death rate. But Kern has in fact observed only 179

deaths. The cause of death could not therefore be determined in the overwhelming majority of cases. The informa-tion on the 179 dead patients is completely inadequate and no autopsy re-corded death by heart attack.

In view of this state of affairs Kern's assertion that heart attacks can be avoided by taking strophantine tablets is simply untenable.

Dr Kern at first tried to prevent any statistical analysis of his treatment, claiming, to use his own words, that the matter was clear in itself.

Kern had to admit defeat on two points of his theory at Heldelberg. He no longer insists that the traditional treatment of heart insufficiency with the usual digitalis preparations provokes heart attacks. He has also abandoned the view that competitive sport increases the danger of Strophantine is a drug that the body is unable to absorb satisfactorily through the stomach. As the amounts absorbed vary after oral treatment doctors normally use the substance only as an in-

Dr Kern had been liberal in the application of the dosage regulations and his procedure had had no scientific basis. At first he said that strophantine was not fully absorbed when taken orally. Later claimed that is was completely absorbed no matter how it was taken. Professor Aschenbrenner of Hamburg remarked that there was complete confusion about dosage today.

Unfortunately the controversy about strophantine treatment for heart attacks attacks by the established medical pro-

Other more serious effects are becoming increasingly noticeable, doctors stated in Heidelberg. As other doctors have adopted Kern's course of treatment more and more patients with serious lung disorders caused by the heart are being admitted to hospitals after treatment with strophantine instead of the usual effective medicaments.

There are fears that Kern's course of treatment is more likely to cause heart attacks in people suffering from heart disorders rather than prevent them.

(Frankfurter Allgemeine Zeitung für Deutschland, 22 November 1971)

Dr Berthold Kern

Contact lenses more widely used

A t its annual congress in Wicsbaden the Opticians Association pointed out the increasing importance of contact lenses for sight deficiencies.

An association spokesman told the press that contact lenses would be used more in future as they are considerably more efficient than spectacles.

A million people wear contact lenses in the Federal Republic. The figure for the whole of Europe is six million. Twelve to fourteen million people wear them in the United States.

Twenty-four million people in the Federal Republic wear glasses. The number of people wearing contact lenses has doubled in the past ten years.

What is happening in Germany? How do Germans view world events?

DIE WELT, Germany's great independent quality daily with nationwide circulation carries the answers to these questions plus full coverage of economic affairs. DIE WELT is available all over the Federal Republic and in more than 120 countries abroad. It is one of the world's very few really great newspapers. DIE WELT speaks authoritatively for West Germany all over the world. If you want to establish business connections with Germany or if you want to reach top people in the Federal Republic, then you need DIE WELT - both as reader and as rected at educated people, decision-makers and the best advertising medium: leading and influential figures in politics, economics and the arts. DIE WELT provides the comprehensive and reliable news coverage that helps people form their own opinion on world affairs with informed commentaries on national and

DIE WELT is published daily in Berlin, Hamburg and (for the Rhine-Ruhr industrial area) in Essen. From Monday to Friday the circulation is 280,000 rising to 315,000 on Saturdays. Regular subscriptions account for 78 % of net sales; the remainder are sold through normal trade channels. DIE WELT is available in over 8,000 districts of West Germany, including West Berlin. Overseas sales in 120 countries account for five per cent of total circulation.

DIE WELT'S editorial content has won, for it acclaim all over the world as an authoritative voice of West Germany. Its circulation and readership indicate the paper's influence. The only West German newspaper mentioned in a recent series of articles on sixteen leading world newspapers in The Times, London, was DIE WELT. In 1967 DIE WELT was awarded a medal of honour for outstanding journalistic achievement by the Faculty of Journalism at the University of Columbia (Mo.).

DIE WELT is one of the world's great news- DIE WELT is ideal reading matter for people papers. Many 'celebrated names in German who want to be informed about West Germany journalism are among its regular contributors. and the West German view on world affairs. For DIE WELT has staff correspondents in the people who wish to make contact with Federal major cities of the world. It is a newspaper di-

DIE WELT

Hamburg · Berlin · Essen · Frankfurt/M. D 2000 Hamburg 36 Kaiser-Wilhelm-Straße 1 Telex: 02-11 149, 02-14 272

No. 505 - 16 December 1971

AGRICULTURE

Without doubt a number of farms are in financial difficulties and many of those that are struggling are mong the group that on the surface seem high level of productivity, but for too long this pointer has been heeded all too

And it is hard to blame the farmers for making this mistake since the guaranteed

excesses without any thought to where

Fanners can claim that in the past

wenty years they have increased their heams. Nor should they be despised for being proud of this achievement even bough there was a lot of ground to be made up in agriculture as compared with

But it is becoming clearer all the time

hat an increase in productivity is often a had thing for the state of the market shough productivity boosting "at any

Anyone who produces commodities at my price without keeping a wary eye on the state of the market cannot expect too

pice" may at first seem beneficial for the productivity beyond anyone's wildest and how they can be sold.

other spheres of the economy.

to be particularly progressive.

To play about with exports could harm the whole economy, Fritz Dietz warns

THE GERMAN TRIBUNE

Fritz Dietz, 62, sole owner of the was good. Besides, everyone must realise Frankfurt firm Gabrüder Dietz, was a founder member of the Frankfurt Chambar of Commerce in the early post-war years, has been its chairman since 1964. was a founder member of the Federal Republic Trade Association in Bonn, a body he has also headed since 1952. Consul Dietz is also chairman of the Joint Committee of Federal Republic Industry and holds a number of honorary posts in the economic, political, cultural, scientific and sporting fields.

The Germans, so a number of foreign L observers maintain, are particularly prone to emotional extremes: exaggerated elation when the going is good, undue pessimism when it is not. A sanguine sense of reality is, it is claimed, not the Germans' strongest point.

This characteristic ought not to be generalised but it should not be dismissed as irrelevant either. I feel we should especially bear it in mind at present now that the economic trend threatens to lead on to an outsize emotional swing that could in its turn dangerously accelerate the swing of the economic pendulum.

To judge by reports in daily papers and specialist publications in recent weeks one could well gain the impression that we are on the brink of economic disaster. In October there was talk of full employment being threatened; now there is talk of a full-scale crisis and mass unemployment round the corner.

A number of pundits are already drawing parallels with the thirties' slump. Comments and forecasts of this kind are. in my opinion, extremely irresponsible and indeed dangerous. They bear no relation to the current economic situation and intensify uncertainty to intolerable that things cannot go on improving ad infinitum in any sector.

Not that there can be any doubt that the economic situation in all sectors and at all levels has grown a good deal more difficult and in part extremely difficult no matter what distinctions are drawn.

The detailed shape the downturn is to take will depend on us all, politicians, entrepreneurs, trade unionists and indeed

The present state of affairs is our own responsibility and the result of a lack of moderation in a variety of sectors. It can only be coped with by means of common sense and discipline.

Over a year ago I recommended a moratorium on wage demands as a means of toning down the trend towards price increases and promptly met with criticism from all and sundry. In the present circumstances it is more than likely that a wage freeze will be imposed forcibly.

Anyone can make mistakes but those who are responsible for everyone are duty bound to recognise a mistake for what it is and correct it.

This applies in equal measure to those who are not prepared to forgo their excessive wage demands and to those who feel able as things are either to increase prices to an unwarranted extent or further to increase them. Above all it applies to those who despite their better dgment continue to ride the tide.

Who, when all is said and done, is stopping us from doing what is necessary in the interest of all and sundry? Who. for instance, is going to stop the Federal government from deciding on an immediate return to fixed exchange rates?

This is a move I consider to be of paramount importance, particularly as a Tales of woe are as inappropriate now as crows of delight were when the going as solution to the currency crisis is not in sight and the economy of this country can no longer bear the burden alone.

Plays on words and tricks are no longer any use. What we need are decisions and the right ones. We must re-establish reliable bases for calculating profit and loss, climb down from exaggerated de-mands and all tighten the belt a little.

We can simply no longer afford to spend more than we all earn. This is the only way to regain the necessary confi-

The same goes for the country's finances. Public spending must be spelt with a small "s" and saving with a large one. The Federal government, states, cities and local authorities must no longer behave as though they can count on the same growth rates as in 1970.

Tax increases as introduced by a number of cities serve only to intensify the economic downturn and represent no answer to the problem of financing local authority requirements.

Nor can we afford any longer to overlook the fact that our economic potential is not, in the long run, up to footing the bill of gigantic administrative machinery involving more than 150 Ministers and State secretaries, ten Federal states and a total of more than two million civil servants.

This applies in equal measure to management in the private sector. What is needed is more action and less administra-

At an economic turning-point it is essential frankly to admit not only the mistakes that have been in monetary policy but also and without delay to put export costing back on a sound footing.

Above all one basic economic premise must be recognised for what it is: the fact that we as a country depend on exports. To play about with exports is to jeopardise the entire economy.

This is something that cannot be said minimum prices offered by the European too clearly in view of the fact that a community's agricultural polnumber of politicians are still toying with ity challenge the farmer to produce the idea that the economy is weighted too heavily in favour of exports and that economic policy decisions provide a convenient opportunity of changing this state

Exports are to be cut back and in their place there is to be more public spending at home in order to carry out reform policies that have so far proved a failur.

It is high time to part company with mental exercises of this kind, overweighed in favour of social policy as they are Exports can neither be allowed to be come the whipping-boy of economic policy nor be hoisted into the saddle of the packhorse of reform policies.

Last but not least we ought to view be cooling-off of the economy as an oppose unity of reverting to realistic yardstickin politics and economies. On this basis it will be easier and more such sympathy if he finds he has to sell is produce "at any price". effective to resort to the right economic Compared with matters concerning promeasures at the right time and in the right dose. This would greatly assist everyonen action techniques, however, considerasteering clear of emotional extremes. ion of the state of the market has so far (Wirtschaftswoche/Der Volkswit, 19 November 1971) tken a back seat in the organisational individual

lans of the farmers. There should be no denying that Franffurter Allgemeine

Farmers must keep an eye on market conditions or suffer

For they have laid too much emphasis business management and applying individual market requirements have been carried out by agriculture, collecting gonomic theories and have embarked on produce in more marketable groups, improving quality to meet the needs of For years it has been stressed that a more demanding customers and the like. igh level of sales is more important than

Nevertheless the individual farmer knows too little about what makes the farm produce market tick und thus he is unable to make the adjustments necessary to his production methods.

Of course specialist farming publications regularly print market reports, but a genuine overall picture of the state of the market, which could be useful in affecting production methods is sadly lacking.

It is hard to get away from the impression that farming is a kind of blind-man's-buff. Farmers produce commodities without knowing what chance there is of selling them and it is left to chance whether the farmer gets an at least partially acceptable price.

If the farm is not to be just a place for churning out raw materials but also a supply factory for cooperatives, for trade and for the food industry joint ventures and mutual ties are necessary.

The idea of commissioned farm produce should not remain confined to the production sphere for much longer. It has after all found few friends in this sphere. It is in the sphere of marketing that closer cooperation would be of benefit. Butobviously the farmers are so opposed to contractual ties that it is difficult to get this idea off the ground.

Obviously the cooperatives and rural trade companies must become genuine relay stations between the producers and the market and must be able to give farmers reliable information about types of produce, sowing, tending crops and fertilisers. They must tell farmers what is the best kind of fodder for their herds, they must make the decisions about the quantities that are to be delivered and the time at which they should be delivered, otherwise farmers will not be able to use them to gain a clear understanding of the state of the agricultural produce market.

In Sweden for example things seem to be going better. The state of the agricultural market is by no means as hectic as here thanks to precise reports. Agricultural organisations are obviously able to control the state of the farm produce market better by giving farmers plenty of notice. Thus the Swedes are able to prevent prices falling seriously through over-production.

A few years ago it seemed as though agriculture in this country had got over one problem by bringing some sense to the sadly neglected potato market. It looked as though it would be possible to boost the sales of potatoes. They were no longer concealed in jute sacks, but were displayed in plastic see-through bags clearly marking what type they were and whether they cooked "firm" or "mashy".

What the farmers failed to do was to take the next step and turn them into an end-product. This business has been taken over by foreign competitors, particularly the businesslike Dutch.

In 1970 almost 184,000 tons of processed potatoes were imported into the Federal Republic and 157,800 tons of them came from The Netherlands. It is estimated that the increase in processed potato imports this year will be in the area of lifty per cent. The Federal Association of Potato Processing Industries calls this "a shocking state of affairs" for West German agriculture. The market has been thrown away and it will be very difficult to win it back now.

Pork is a glowing example of the gap between production and demand. It seems to swing like a pendulum between excessive production and a shortage. The constant ups and downs of supply and hence price have led to the expression "the pork cycle" being coined.

Those concerned seem to believe that the pork cycle is just in the nature of things and cannot be altered.

In fact it is - in comparison with other branches of agriculture - relatively simple to adjust pork production quantity and quality-wise to the state of the market at any given time.

The situation with regard to eggs. however, is a result of production without any regard for actual demand. No wonder, then, that prices have plummeted to such a low level that at times profitability seems endangered.

Agriculture must pay very close attention to the state of the market at all times because, unlike other branches of the economy, it does not have other opportunities of boosting sales.

The vehicle-manufacturing industry, for instance, can boost sales by bringing out new models, improving technical details, giving motors an extra burst of power and adding new colours to the range of

Swifter market appraisals

But new lines in foodstuffs, although they have a chance of gaining sales, do so by taking sales away from other foodstuffs and thus do little to lighten the farmer's worries about declining sales.

Agriculture must get to grips with the problem of gauging the state of the market faster. More information dissemination is needed as well as further cooperation between those who produce foodstuffs and those who put them on the shelves of shops and stores.

Part of this development must be what Farmers Union President Constantin Freiherr von Heeremann has already recommended. Farmers must conclude longterm supply and collection contracts.

Rudolf Maxeiner (Frankfurter Allgemeine Zeitung für Deutschland, 20 November 1971)

Since reports have been issued by the Committee of Economic Experts sur-Economic wise men complain of veying economic developments as a whole the Committee has been complaining that according to the letter of the law altheir impotency to alter things though it may diagnose economic weaknesses it may not make recommendations

The Committee explains the full train At the moment, however, it seems of its plight in one sentence: "Once again likely that the Committee will be far economic policymakers must avoid doing from unhappy about the ban on making what they would normally do in the face of such a danger because they have to Indeed no one who is called upon to take care of economic stabilisation."

throw some light on the economic year Why "must avoid"? This is not a case 1972 is in an enviable position. For 1972 of the Committee taking up its own is hidden behind a wintry veil of fog and individual and very different stand, it is when we enter it in a few weeks time we simply following in the wake of public opinion. For this is a sermon that has will do so with fears and prejudices heaped upon us.
With the past seven reports issued by been preached from all quarters for many months, that has been painted as a the Committee of Experts we have seen dilemma and has even been raised to the how wide the gap between a knowledge level of a political manifesto. of economic theory and its application in Any responsible person involved in the formulation of economic policies is, economic and industrial policymaking The Committee's reports were just as must know that the dilemma of "stability actual economic or full-employment" is not an invention policies pursued. This is merely a state- of the SPD/FDP coalition, nor was it ment of fact, not a reproach. And invented by the CDU/CSU.

nobody could have expected that with the issuing of the eighth economic report It is simply the expression of the either-or decision that must one day be everything would suddenly have righted taken. The beautiful sounding, idealistic wording of the 1967 Stabilisation Act deceived us. This has proved to be just as useful and useless as its predecessors. It is useful as a Since 1967 we have failed to grasp that book in which problems are expounded stabilisation and full employment both in the clearest terms, much clearer indeed make an ideal goal to aim for and that than they are in day-to-day political even with successful legislation being discussions. But it is useless as a reliable passed the day-to-day political necessity guide to economic policy decisions and of deciding anew which of the two should the time at which these should be have the priority at that moment (not implemented.

le) has not become any the less pressing. Public awareness of the realities of recent economic developments has shown an astonishingly speedy reaction in recent weeks. Job security has become a growing concern in many families.

This does not mean that "the inflationary mentality" has now found an irrevocable position in our emotions.

It is simply that apart from worries there are also big worries to worry about! For instance the labour struggle in the metal industry, which is not doing anybody any good.

It must be stated clearly that with the stabilisation policies continuing along the present lines it may be possible to achieve a fractional improvement to the rate of price increases, perhaps dragging the figure down from 5.7 per cent to 5.4.

The statistical methods used in calculating the annual rate of price rises have something to do with this. The Committee explains that there would still be a 2.5 per cent increase in the price index in 1972 as a result of a "hangover" even if nothing happened to force prices up. But as far as employment is concerned the figure is up to 100,000 or even in the several-hundred-thousands and for each day a man is out of work there is dole instead of earnings.

If it is true that Karl Schiller's ten milliard Mark reserve fund, which he to call up as a reinforcement at any time, represents a poorly armed force rather than a crack brigade it is high time he threw this into the thick of the battle. The more time passes the weaker this band becomes.

The Bonn government and the provincial assembly governments should at hesitate to put the monies they have kept in reserve back into circulation for investment purposes. They should do this with alacrity but not excessive haste. They should do it when and where the state of the labour market and competitiveness allow it, and that is almost everywhere.

As for the ten-per-cent income tax surcharge levied temporarily and it payable the government is doing well to bide its time rather than pay this back now. The consumer goods industries do not need such a shot in the arm and repayment now would not be rewarded with a slackening off of pay demands.

If the government vacillates much mon there is a danger that the mistakes of 1966 will be repeated, with all their unpleasant consequences. Consequences from which we are still suffering.

Schiller's metaphor of weeding before sowing is neat. But obviously the Finance and Economic Affairs Minister is overlooking the fact that he is thereby coming close to doing what he always reproached his predecessor for, namely cutting the level of employment to bring wages and prices back into line. And if he than does his sowing too late there will be too many weeds in his field. Armin Grünewald

(Stutigarter Zeitung, 24 November 1971)

he old futuristic dream of feeding mankind with artificial forms of wrishment, which biochemists dreamt or years has now become a reality," ated Professor Konrad Lang, the former weetor of the Physics and Chemistry institute at Mainz University, and Proesor Coats of the Royal Australian follege of Surgeons (Melbourne). They were speaking at the opening of a w plant opened Pharmazeutische Werke immer & Co., Erlangen at Plattling in

in a tew weeks time this computeratrolled factory will begin mass proction of "astronaut food", a diet in wder form of which all ingredients are athetically produced.

These developments, Professor Lang frecasts, will open up great new possilities for medicine, space travel and Mople in disaster-stricken areas as well as iping us to cope with the population plosion when there is a dearth of atural foodstuffs.

Solubility in water and a pleasant taste ip to make the use of this artificial em of nutrition simpler.

The head of research and production at immer, Werner Fekl, stressed that even he most spoilt of patients could accept hithetic drinks with orange, cocoa and toth flavours. These foodstuffs can also te infused into patients in a coma.

minerals and sources of fatty acids which

Astronauts' food soon to go into mass production

are capable of keeping a human being alive and fit for a long period without any recourse to normal foodstuffs.

Synthetics foodstuffs were first producby American scientists attached to NASA at the Life Science Laboratory in California. Further research has now been carried out on these foodstuffs by the Pfrimmer firm (founded 1919) in Erlangen and they have already been tested at Erlangen University Clinic Surgical Department in ante-operative treatment. From there the blochemists got the idea of developing a compact form of nutrition free from roughage.

In Plattling this form of nutrition is being produced in the new factory and it opens up many new therapeutic possibilities. This concentrated food, which is still described as a diet, is absorbed in the first few inches of the intestines starving out intestinal bacteria and making the intestines and their contents completely sterile after a few days.

This will mean a great stride forward for stomach surgery and for the treatment of liver ailments since there will not This drinkable balanced diet of synthet- be the usual ammonia production by taily produced materials is made up of mino acids, carbohydrates, vitamins, mino acids, carbohydrates, mino acid ailments.

Wolf Pfrimmer, the firm's medical assistant and grandson of its founder, spoke about the development of the synthetic meal. Back in 1959 in Erlangen there was the development of the first specially made dietary solution permitting artificial intra-venous feeding, complety by-passing the alimentary tract.

At that time Werner Fekl became the first biochemist to produce pure crystallised amino acids in the form of a fully balanced nutritional solution for stomach therapy. His work greatly increased the reputation of the firm.

Professor Lang pointed out that it had long been part of many therapies that the of food every day. patient should be wholly or partially starved.

This therapy was designed to spare the system extra efforts of digestion. But recent investigations have shown that precisely the opposite was the outcome. The body cells need a constant stream of and West. food material to remain in good working

Artificial feeding intravenously not only speeds recovery, but also reduces the risk to a patient prior to an operation.

One 44 year-old patient in Australia who was fed intravenously with the artificial nutrition prepared in Erlangen even put on 19 kilograms in weight! He received 1,278 bottles of the infusion solution before his recovery.

During the famine of the Nigerian civil war thousands of children in what was then Biafra were saved from starvation with these man-made foodstuffs. For those children whose bodies were too racked with hunger were unable to digest the normal foodstuffs sent by charities. But Norwegian doctors working in Biafra administered the Erlangen preparation to tide the children over until they could be given normal food. Despite the advances in factory production of synthetic foods Dr Fekl says: "The food pill, which illustrated magazines love to conjure up every now and again, is unlikely ever to exist. It is impossible to concentrate all the foodstuffs a human needs into a pill. The body requires at least 400 to 500 grams

But, he added, many essential food factors can now be synthetically produced. Many products that are today rolling out of the chemical factories by the wagonload are being tested for their nutritional value in laboratories in East

We have long since passed the stage of producing a food ersatz. Without doubt the foodstuffs that are at present being manufactured in laboratories and tested on hospital patients will one day be of benefit to the whole of mankind.

Hubert Neumann (Süddeutsche Zeitung, 22 November 1971)

Now the world's newest airline... designed togiveyou more for your The second secon

The second of the same of the second material

The first of the control of the cont

In the past, most airlines (including us) have tempted travellers with pictures of smiling stewardesses and exotic locales. Which is fine and which will coninue. But Pan Am® doesn't think it is quite anough any longer; so we're taking off in acompletely new direction.

Today, when you buy a Pan Amticket. you get even more for your money. Because we do things that make your travel more profitable and more enjoyable. Things that invite comparison shopping with any other airline You carry your luggage that way and in the world. Our 747s have exclusive compartmented containers for everything you don't carry aboard. On the ground or in the air it all rides upright and secure. Helps protect against spilling and denting

World's most experienced 747.

In 1970, Pan Am 747s flew well over million passengers, which makes our 747s the most experienced in the world. his experience pays off in more ways han one for you; Because we've had the chance to think of a lot of new ways to. make flying with us easier and more comfortable.

Try out our 747 for size take a short hop.

You don't have to fly across the Allantic to try a 747. You can fly one beween London and Frankfurt, Paris and Rome or Amsterdam and Brussels. And after you've had the short hop, you'll want he long one.

deservations anywhere, on the spot. Need a hotel in New York?

Acar in New Delhi? Connections to Budapest? Almost anything's possible when your Travel Agent teams up with PANAMAC®, That's Pan Am's compuenzed communications network and no business in the world has a bigger one. I stretches around the globe to wherever Pan Am flies and can arrange all your liotel and tour reservations on the spot. Time saved, Money saved, PANAMAC does it all.

"Handles up"

for luggage

The Greatest Show in the Air. Ours alone.

When you fly Pan Am to the U.S.A., you've got Theatre-in-the-Alr® flying with you, it gives you a choice of two feature films*, Broadway show music, classical music and rock music. All under one roof,

And it gives you the newest kind of program in the air, "Music-to-sleep-by" a program specially engineered for people who'd like to go to sleep in the air but just can't. It'll lull you right off.

. What's more, both music and movie will come to you on our new earphones. They're also specially designed - to be comfortable, light weight and easy on your ears.

Travel Books Galore.

Long established as authoritative sources of information on the worldwide travel scene.

No other airline comes close to providing you with such a wealth of titles. Among them: New Horizons® World Gulde, Pleasures of the Spa, Passports & Profits, and many more. Available at nominal cost at any Pan Am Travel Agent or Pan Am Ticket Office.

We're in your business.

If you're in business and you need help in overseas expansion, you've come to the right place. Our exclusive Worldwide Marketing Service has listings of buyers and sellers of all kinds of things in all kinds of places.

Need we remind you that we're flying in and out of 124 places in 82 lands on all six continents? If so, we'd better remind you that's more places than any other airline.

Fly now, pay later.

When you fly Pan Am you don't have to let money stand in your way, because we're ready and willing to finance your trip for you. You can pay us back in easy monthly instalments. Call your Pan Am Travel Agent for details.

Experience counts.

Forty years in the air have made us the world's most experienced airline. The airline that has done - and will keep doing - more for its passengers.

During the weeks to come, you're going to hear even more about our new Ideas for extra value. Ideas that only an airline as experienced as Pan Am can

Something new from the world's most experienced airline.

 $\mathcal{A} = \{1, \dots, 2, \dots, 2\}$ the second of the second of the second

F 17

the state of the s

LEISURE

Dancing schools as popular as ever with young and old

The gangling youth hurried over to the young girl, made a clumsy bow, took and the others are too dear. So we go to parties and dance parties that are arrangher hand and waltzed away. They danced ed by Wernicke. There is no problem off not quite in time with the three-four about what you wear, the drinks are not music, grimly concentrating on the dance too expensive and we meet people with steps, the boy's not following the girl's in similar interests."

"one, two and three..." about it. Inhibitions still have to be swept away, of the school's success? preference for the foxtrot overcome and prejudices against the tango disposed of. At first glance it would seem that the heyday of the dancing school is not yet over. They have adapted themselves to the changing times. Dancing lessons in November 1971 must be fun.

For years since the beat craze began and reached its highpoint dancing schools have had to fight for their existence. The Each dance is practised for about ten depression was considerable but now it has been overcome. The influx back to next one. In the first lessons the tango is the schools reveals a business bomm.

Investigations have shown that dancing has now been included in many schools in sports periods. Boys and girls of eleven and twelve are taking part and 15 and 16-year-olds are again discovering the dancing schools.

Indeed they are no longer going to dancing lessons in whole classes as they once did. There are now only a few from each class who are laughed at and scorned by the others. Parents hardly have any say in the matter

Ursula, 16, said: "My parents are not concerned if I go or not. They give me the money and I go dancing, because I want to learn to dance, because I think its

Students and youths undergoing apprentice training as well as married couples of all ages join in the dancing teachers' classes. There are also people in their mid-twenties attending.
Why do they go to dancing lessons?

Georg, a chemistry student, 24, said: "My wife and I used to go to dancing lessons separately. Now we can learn to dance together. We are now a little too old for A housewife from Bonames, 25, said: "In our position we have to know how to dance. We don't want to know about the foxtrot that is designed for widows. My husband has office and social responsibilities, so we want to hold our end up and not go pumping round the floor."

Students from 15 to 65 at the Frankfurt Wernicke dancing school maintain that knowing how to dance is to be socially acceptable. But one of the main reasons why people go to dancing lessons is to meet people of their own age and then when the lessons are over to go out with them. One pupil questioned: "Where in Frankfurt can you go dancing?"

The dancing class people answer this question themselves. They say: "Most bars have dance floors that are too small,

Let's play English

rlangen's Youth Centre has introduced La new factor into pre-school education by providing three-year-olds with the rudiments of English in a teaching course entitled "We play English and it's fun."

Claudia Hofmann, the head of the course, is an American and a sociology graduate. "My course is based exclusively on learning through play," she reports.
"Three-year-olds should learn a foreign language like their own mother tongue." A similar French course will start in January 1972.

These are the facts that attract people Dancing in 1971 still has a smack of the of all ages and from all social levels to the Helmut and Rosemarie Wernicke conmented: "We don't have any social axe to grind. We love dancing and we try to show other people how they can enjoy it

Their teaching methods are unconventional, their touch is light, but 'she' is as strict as 'he' is in many ways. The ninety-minute lessons are full of variety. minutes then the class passes on to the only lightly touched upon and popular dances are taught with regard to the carnival season.

Young lads with long hair are as welcome as young girls wearing hot pants. Girls and boys who play the wallflower are soon shaken out of their seclusion. If there are too many girls older dance students are roped in or trios are formed. There is plenty of kidding between teacher and pupils.

The demands of youth control the dance floor as ever. And as ever the dancing class is a kind of marriage market. Peter, 23, laughing said: "There is a lot to be discovered here." Peter, a student, drew Ortrud, 16, towards him. He was badgered into going to the dancing classes by his parents. The first time they came with him. "So that I did not run away," he quipped. Now he is one of the regular standbys, dances with the advanced class and his parents are delighted, so much so that Peter's young brother is now brought along.

Dancing schools have adapted themselves to the times. The association of dancing teachers opposed modernisation vehemently. Now several times a year programmes are drawn up, useful records use in a dance discotheque are produced so that an interesting teaching plan can be undertaken.

Differences in cost from one school to another do not exist. An 85-hour course of study with explanations and parties costs from 60 to 100 Marks. And a book for study at home has been produced.

Ute Lieske

Fair sideshows and booths have a rough time of it wo years ago this country's last 'flea circus' closed down and since then 'the legless lady' and 'the sword enter' have become a rarity. Huge ferris wheels, roundabouts designed like Apollo capsules, super sputniks and scenic railways costing 1.5 million Marks are now the major attractions at seasonal fairs.

This change of traditional local fairs into mechanised and technical amusements presents problems to sidshow owners. This alteration into gigantic operations has brought financial ruin almost to fair ground managers who have not kept pace with the times. In a recent press statement the West German association of sideshow owners said that the situation was getting "more and more difficult" for our members.

During 1970 the 4,000 fair sideshows in this country, employing 60,000 people, had a turnover of more than one milliard Marks. Max Eberhard, president of the sideshow owners organisation said 'things are not so good with us."

Between 120 and 150 million people annually attend local fairs organised in the Federal Republic from Flensburg to Füssen. By comparison only 6.1 million football fans attended matches during a year. But profits have not increased as rents for grounds have. This is particularly so in southern Germany, where fairs are more frequent than in the north, where ground owners demand exorbitant sums as rentals. The most costly sites are

(Frankfurter Rundschau, 23 November 1971) at Bad Dürkheim, well known for its

(Hannoversche Presse, 28 October 1971) Giant wheel at the annual Hamburg fair

(Photo: Conti-Press)

has tried to give a new public image to "grandpa's fair" striving to make it more popular. They regret that the arts of the juggler and sideshowmen have had total second place after the delights of their sion. It is quite obvious that it would impossible to restore fair booths and sideshows to their previous nominate. sideshows to their previous popular, but Herr Eherhard, head of the fair association, firmly believes neverther that a return to past traditions walk arge the prospects of the future. the public at large the public at large.

But it is obvious that carousels a merry-go-rounds are still extremely p pular. Herr Eberhard said: "At least its impossible to reproduce the ground sausages on television."

Despite the winter recession and some bankrupteies (moves to merge are ks strong among sideshow owners that it other aspects of our economy) as well a the usual complaints the future for sideshow owners and fair managers knd | so dismal as they would like to make out. There is a healthy business in exports fairground equipment to countries being the Iron Curtain, where more lesiss time gives fairs an important plus because of their abilities "to provide amusement and to help people relax".

Publicity agencies and large department stores have taken to setting up "minifairs" in order to setting up "minifa fairs" in order to attract customers.

34 are the most frequent visitors of fair. One of the most difficult problems that booth owners and sideshow proprietors have to face is schooling for their children. It is estimated that 500 children are involved and they have to charge school something like twenty times annually.

This occupational hazard has had disadvantageous effect in recruitive people to work at fair booths an sideshows.

In Holland mobile schools have been established to cater for these travelling children. In France it is preferred to sen them to boarding schools.

Thanks to the initiative of Pasto Stegmann from Rothenburg and Father Schöning from Augsburg plans are well under way for the establishment of a boarding school in southern Germany to Offer teaching facilities to these itinerant Olaf Ihlau children.

(Süddeutsche Zeitung, 23 November 1971)

I MUNICH OLYMPICS

No. 505 - 16 December 1971

hree women called back to take up their swords

A clympic oath is to be taken in the ly surprised. Gundi me of all participiants by a woman Theuerkauf found elete, 32-year-old Heide Schmidandmann. A one-time fencing ace, her gne was put forward by Willi Daume,

At the Rome Olympics in 1960 Heidi, Augsburg girl, was the surprise winner is gold medal in the women's rapier year later in Turin the attractive usic student gave the lie to the claim that or Olympic victory was a fluke by aming first in the world championships, servedly it was generally acknowledged. She has been nominated to take the Dympic cath in recognition of her ding as one of the most successful just-war personalities in the world of port this country has to offer and her facing career is evidently not yet over us done with. The indications are that she will not sausages fair, and Munich. Munich is the case of the c levies a tax on fairs, five per cent of Saarbrücken and Gudrun Theuerkauf

In the past few months the association These three "musketeers" are un-

Theuerkauf found the idea most amusing. Indeed, there is something amusing about the Fencing Association, having put the old guard out to graze after the 1968 Olympics in Mexico City, now, two years later, changing its mind and recalling its female veterans. "Often enough they said we were too old and ought to make way for the youngsters," Gud-Theuerkauf run recollects. hints did not go unnoticed. Having fenced for more Olympic fencing winner Heldi Schmid-Grundmann, here seen with her eleven-month-old daughter, has been proposed to take the Olympic oath for the 1972 Munich Olympics. She is the first woman ever to have been proposed to take the Olympic experienced all the sport, the three veterans were increasingly thinking in terms of their private lives. They wanted either to settle down and marry or to devote more time to their families and so decided to down swords. Little more was heard of them. A new

than fifteen years,

which they had ups and downs of

in the process of generation answered the call to arms, talented and promising. But the newcomers failed to make the grade. There ere-ne "vertical take-offs" in the world of easy time of it as an Olympic victor either, fencing. It takes years to put the finishing touches to promise of talent.

Since 19 November a high school in Grunewald, a suburb of West Berlin, has boasted a new student teacher of blology and physical education - Bodo

Tümmler, the 1966 European 1,500 metres champion and 1968 Olympic bronze medallist over the same distance

It is only a stone's throw from the school to the training facilities of Charlottenburg Sports Club, of which Turnmler has been a member since he was

The proximity is no coincidence. Once again the nearly 28-year-old Berliner aims to challenge the world's best, having been out of action last year and this because of

with a best time of 3 min. 36.5 sec.

The pre-Olympic world fencing championships in Vienna proved that the newcomers are far from the target of their dreams. This being the case the Fencing Association recalled the old

Heidi Schmid-Grundmann still lives in Augsburg and is the mother of an eleven-month-old daughter. She had no for in those days she travelled to Munich and the college of music every day.

Things are none too easy for her now either. Little Elke needs looking after, Augsburg lacks a really first-rate fencer she could train with and the new training centre in Bonn is a long way away and takes time and effort to reach. Heidi has to make genuine sacrifices if she is to make the grade in Munich.

Helga Mees-Volz has an easier time of it. In Ludwigshafen, where she now lives, the silver medallist at Tokyo can train with ex-national champion Jürgen Brecht and as regards training courses in Bonn the distance is no real handicap.

Besides, her husband is himself a prospective Olympic athlete - a wrestler - and is all in favour of his wife's reawakened Olympic ambitions.

Despite being the mother of three children Gudrun Theuerkauf is in the best position. Ten-year-old Thomas and eightyear-old Stefan can already look after their little sister and manage for themselves to a certain extent.

The family lives in Duisdorf, a suburb of Bonn and no distance away from the new official training centre. Belgian champion Coibion, the men's coach, not unnaturally sees a lot of Gudrun.

The three "lost sheep" may now be in different positions but on one point they are agreed. "We are no longer as fit and quick off the mark as we used to be but we can probably make good our two-year break between now and Munich and will then stand a fair chance of winning a medal or two."

So the three oldtimers are headed for an Olympic comeback. The fact that the Olympics are to be held in this country may well have decided them to give it a Gudrun Theuerkauf and Helga Mees-

Volz are 34, Heidi Schmid-Grundmann is two years their junior. Many of their past opponents are still among the world's best so this country's team will not be an solated group of relative grandmothers. Heidi Schmid-Grundmann can take the Olympic oath with an easy conscience. There is unlikely to be a more bona fide amateur at Munich than she is.

Stefan Lázár (Die Zeit, 26 November 1971)

According to surveys it seems that so laried workers between the ages of 18 and

lodo Tümmler in action (Photo: Nordbild)

a cartilage operation on the knee. This season Tummler has raced four times after being out of action since the end of 1969 with quadriceps trouble and a youngster.

the practice has restored his confidence of making a comeback in the Olympic The first was the West Berlin 800 metres championships. Then, three weeks later, the national 1,500 metres championships and although it was decided that he was not to take part in European athletics championships the European championships as one leg of the SC Berlin team and to be a runner-up in the 1,500 metres championships as a member of the Mainz University team. In the meantime he submitted his degree thesis on the feeding and foodcatching behaviour of terrapins, married his Helga, a nurse from Trier, and spent his honeymoon in Holland with her, returning to a new flat in Berlin. Bodo Tümmler feels at home in his new apartment in what is unquestionably a controversial housing scheme, the Markisches Viertel. He enjoys the view of Tegel Forest and the anonymity of skyscraper life, His only criticism is of the slowness of the firm that was due to instal the lifts, the result of which is that he has the additional training of traipsing up and down ten flights of stairs.

"This season 3 min. 40 sec, would have been my limit," he says, and that would not have been good enough to stand him much chance of winning a medal at the

Asked how he proposes to do in 1972

he replies that "I aim to win every race, though whether I will do so or not is another matter."

Tümmler-vignette of a runner

He is not a man to talk in terms of figures but was prepared to make one forecast. "3 min. 36 sec. ought to be enough to win an Olympic medal in competition with Ryun, Liquori, Keino, Wadoux and Arese."

Ryun's is the first name Tümmler mentions. He reckons the world recordholder will make a tremendous comeback next season.

Tummler is arranging his season dif-ferently from the way he used to in his heyday. In training he is going to run shorter distances faster. Instead of twelvemile cross-country runs eight are going to

"The idea," he says, "is to safeguard my knee. The faster I run the less I strain it." In addition he plans weight-lifting, hill training and jumping. Manfred Steffny

(Kölner Stadt-Anzelger, 23 November 1971)

SA $ 0.05 Colombia Col. $ 1
Usida Can. 8 — 20 Ethiopia Eth. 8 0.30 Hungary Fr. Luxembourg Hr 8 Pakistan Rs 0.50 S. Vict Nam V.N. 8 15.— Yugoslavia Din. 1. Stellar Can. 8 — 20 Fiji 11 d Icaland Kr 5.— Luxembourg Hr 80.— Panama B. 0.15 Spain Pts 8.— Zambia 11 Can. 8 — 20 Fig. Spain Pts 8.— Zambia 11 — 20 Fi	egata tegota	Af 10.— DA 0.50 Esc. 1.— $ m n 45.— 10 c. $ 3.— bir 0.— $ b 1.50 N. Cr. $ 0.35 Lev 0.95 F. Bu. 10.— P. Bu. 10.— Can. $20 cR.—50	Congo (Brazzavillo) F.C.F.A. 30.— Congo (Kinshasa) Makula 7.— Costa Rica C 0 85 Cuba P 0.13 Cyprus Kcs 0.50 Cabonay F.C.F.A. 30.— Denmark dkr 0.90 Dom. Rep. dkr 0.90 El Salvador Ethiopus Eth. $ 0.30 Ethiopus Eth. $ 0.30	Franco: Gabon Gambia Germany Ghana Great Britain Greece Gustemala Gusyana Guinea Halti Honduras (B Honduras Hong Kong Hungary Icaland	Fr 0.60 F C.F. A. 30.— 11 d DM 1 — cedi 0.12 3 p Dr 4.— Q 0.15 BWI $ 0.20 F.G. 30.— G 0.65 r.} $ BH 0.20 L 0.25 HK $ 0.70 Ft 1.— Kr 5.—	Iran Iraq Iroland Ispool Italy Ivory Coast Jameica Japen Jordan Kenya Kuwait Laps Lebanon Liberia Luzembourg	RI 10.— 60 file 11 d 1 £ 0.40 Lir 80 F C.F.A. 30.— 11 d Yen 50 50 file EAs 0.25 50 file Kip 80.— Lib $ 0 15 60 Mills 11 f 8	Malaysia M. 8 Mali FM Mexico 8 Morocco DM Mozambique Esc. Nopal Mohur Netherlands Antilles G. ant New Zealand Nicaragua C Pingor F.C.F.A.: Nigeria Norway nkr Pakistan Rs	0.40 Peru 50.— Philippines 1.50 Poland 85 Portugal 1.— Rhodesia 1.— Ruanda 0.50 Saudi Arabi 9 25 Sweden 9 C. Switzerland 9.85 Sierra Leon 50.— Somaila 11 d. South Afric 0 90 Suth Kores 0.48 S. Vici Nan 8.50.—	S. 3.50 P. phil 0.60 Zi. 0.50 Esc. 1— 11 d F. Rw 12— Leu 0.50 a RL 0.60 akr 0.60 F.S. 0.50 F.C.F.A. 30.— 5 Le 0.10 Sh So 0.90 Rand 0.10 Won 35.— V.N. $ 15.—	Syria Tanzania Thailand Trinidad an Togo Turkey Tunisia Uganda UAR Urguay USAR USSR Venezuela Yugoslavia	PT 5 E S 0 56 EA4 0.2: B 3 d Tobago BWI 8 0.2: F.C.F.A. 30 EA4 0.2: 65 M EA4 0.2: PT 5 P 20 8 0.2: Rbl. 6.16 B d.66 Din. 1

